Assessment of the work of the Security Council during the presidency of the Russian Federation (April 2002)

Introduction

In April 2002, under the presidency of Ambassador Sergey Lavrov, Permanent Representative of the Russian Federation, the Security Council dealt with a number of important issues.

A major focus of the attention of the Council during the month was the situation in the Middle East, particularly in the occupied territories. This issue was considered by the Council 34 times at public and private meetings and in closed consultations.

The Council was also actively seized of issues regarding Afghanistan, Bougainville (Papua New Guinea), Cyprus, East Timor, Georgia, Iraq/Kuwait and Western Sahara. An important public meeting was devoted to the progress in the implementation of resolution 1244 (1999) regarding the situation in Kosovo, Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. Much of the Security Council's time was dedicated to African issues: Angola, Burundi, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Eritrea/Ethiopia, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia. The work of the Counter-Terrorism Committee was reviewed at a public meeting and in consultations. The Council sent a mission to the Great Lakes region.

During the month of April the Council adopted four resolutions and three presidential statements. It held 16 public meetings and 4 private meetings and its members met in informal consultations on 34 occasions. On one occasion the Council held a meeting with troop-contributing countries.

monitoring mechanism established pursuant to resolution 1295 (2000) for a further period of six months, until 19 October 2002. In the resolution the monitoring mechanism is requested to report periodically to the Committee established pursuant to resolution 864 (1993), and to provide a follow-up report on the implementation of the sanctions against UNITA.

On 23 April the Secretary-General's Special Adviser on Africa, Ibrahim Gambari, briefed the Security Council on his mission to Angola where, on 4 April, he witnessed the signing of the Memorandum of Understanding between the Government of Angola and UNITA. The Special Adviser highlighted recent progress in the peace process in the country and said that the chances of returning to war in Angola were negligible, but that the irreversibility of the peace process would depend on a number of factors: the quartering of soldiers of UNITA had to be done properly and on schedule; the humanitarian needs of their families must be met adequately; conditions must be created for the promotion of national reconciliation; and UNITA should emerge as a united political party and credible interlocutor in the Angola peace process. Seven critical areas where the United Nations might play a supporting role were listed. They included military observation of the UNITA quartering process, provision of technical and managerial support in quartering areas, demobilization, reintegration and humanitarian support, and electoral assistance. The United Nations is also expected to chair the Joint Commission during the second phase of the peace process.

He stressed that the presence of Georgian troops in the upper Kodori Valley, in violation of the Moscow Agreement, has been a continuing source of concern. He added that Georgia's inability to provide security guarantees had caused the joint CIS peacekeeping force/UNOMIG patrol of the Kodori Valley, scheduled for 25 and 26 April, to be postponed. Consequently, Georgian compliance with the protocol of 2 April could not be verified.
