Solution to the Challenge of Climate Change: Global Alliance for Ministries and Departments of Peace

Sponsored by International Public Policy Institute

Cosponsored by National Service Conference of the American Ethical Union, The Ribbon International, Operation Peace Through Unity, Association of World Citizens, and NGO Committee on the UN and Sports for Peace and Development

UN Secretary-General Ban Ki Moon believes climate change has implications for peace and security. He says governments must provide integrated, balanced, multi-lateral, collaborative responses for global prevention.

One practical solution being called for by the Global Alliance for Ministries and Departments of Peace (www.mfp-dop.org) is to establish Ministries or Departments of Peace in governments around the world. Among other duties, a country’s Secretary or Minister of Peace would offer strategies to all relevant parties for non-violent resolution of human security-related conflicts arising from scarcity of natural resources (water, breathable air) or more pervasive environmental concerns such as global warming.

Moderator:
Anne Creter, World Peace Prayer Society Values Council; NGO Committee on Spirituality, Values, and Global Concerns; US Delegation to Global Alliance for Ministries and Departments of Peace (Global Alliance)

Speakers:
Marianne H. Perez, Youth Working Group of the Global Alliance and Youth Liaison of US Delegation to Global Alliance

Dorothy J. Maver, Global Alliance Steering Committee and Director of US Delegation to Global Alliance

Nina Meyerhof, Children of the World and US Delegation to Global Alliance

Aaron Voldman, Youth Working Group of the Global Alliance and Youth Liaison of US Delegation to Global Alliance