

G L O B A L H A W C

Helping to Advance Women and Children

On behalf of Global Helping to Advance Women and Children and the UN Family Rights Caucus, I would like to reference a petition signed by over 170,000 people in over 170 countries, calling upon the United Nations and UN Member States to include the family in the UN 2030 Sustainable Development Agenda.

As we discuss the special theme at the 49th Session of the Commission on Population and Development and we consider the enormous gathering of data and statistics that will drive the 2030 Agenda we cannot leave the family behind.

Whereas the family plays an essential role in eradicating poverty and hunger, achieving universal primary education, promoting gender equality and empowering women, reducing child mortality, improving maternal health, and combating HIV/AIDS, malaria and other diseases;(United Nations 2014 CsocD Family Resolution)

Whereas “The stability and cohesiveness of communities and societies largely rest on the strength of the family”; (Secretary General's Family Report 2011 (A/66/62-E/2011/4))

Whereas UN policies and programs too often target individuals rather than families, despite evidence that a family-centered approach yields better results; (See The Family Impact Analysis)

Therefore, we, as concerned government, religious, and civil society leaders along with concerned individuals representing diverse cultures and countries in every region of the world, hereby call upon the United Nations and all Member States to place the family at the center of the UN’s post-2015 development agenda by

G L O B A L H A W C

Helping to Advance Women and Children

On behalf of Global Helping to Advance Women and Children and the UN Family Rights Caucus, I would like to reference a petition signed by over 170,000 people in over 170 countries, calling upon the United Nations and UN Member States to include the family in the UN 2030 Sustainable Development Agenda.

As we discuss the special theme at the 49th Session of the Commission on Population and Development and we consider the enormous gathering of data and statistics that will drive the 2030 Agenda we cannot leave the family behind.

Whereas the family plays an essential role in eradicating poverty and hunger, achieving universal primary education, promoting gender equality and empowering women, reducing child mortality, improving maternal health, and combating HIV/AIDS, malaria and other diseases;(United Nations 2014 CsocD Family Resolution)

Whereas “The stability and cohesiveness of communities and societies largely rest on the strength of the family”; (Secretary General's Family Report 2011 (A/66/62-E/2011/4))

Whereas UN policies and programs too often target individuals rather than families, despite evidence that a family-centered approach yields better results; (See The Family Impact Analysis)

Therefore, we, as concerned government, religious, and civil society leaders along with concerned individuals representing diverse cultures and countries in every region of the world, hereby call upon the United Nations and all Member States to place the family at the center of the UN's post-2015 development agenda by

- Mainstreaming a family perspective in each of the sustainable development and promoting evidence-based/ family-based approaches for achieving them.
- Develop mechanisms to analyze the impact of all laws, policies, and programs on family stability and autonomy.

In addition, we commend the positive developments both here in New York with the formation of the UN Group of Friends of the Family and in Geneva with the passage of the protection of the family resolution (read official number) at the UN Human Right Council

- create “family friendly-policies to support the family and assess such policies and programmes for their impact on family well-being . . . to address the “causes and mitigating the consequences of family disintegration . . . “
 - and “recognizes the family “. . . as a contributor to sustainable development” and therefore "encourages States to give due consideration to the role and status of the family in the context of the post-2015 development agenda,
-

- Mainstreaming a family perspective in each of the sustainable development and promoting evidence-based/ family-based approaches for achieving them.
- Develop mechanisms to analyze the impact of all laws, policies, and programs on family stability and autonomy.

In addition, we commend the positive developments both here in New York with the formation of the UN Group of Friends of the Family and in Geneva with the passage of the protection of the family resolution (read official number) at the UN Human Right Council

- create “family friendly-policies to support the family and assess such policies and programmes for their impact on family well-being . . . to address the “causes and mitigating the consequences of family disintegration . . . “
 - and “recognizes the family “. . . as a contributor to sustainable development” and therefore "encourages States to give due consideration to the role and status of the family in the context of the post-2015 development agenda,
-