I. Background

1. By paragraph 26 of its resolution 2006/49, the Economic and Social Council requested the United Nations Forum on Forests to conclude and adopt at its seventh session a non-legally binding instrument on all types of forests, and in order to facilitate this work decided by paragraph 29 of the same resolution that the Forum should convene an open-ended ad hoc expert group to consider the content of the non-legally binding instrument. The Council further requested the secretariat of the Forum, by paragraph 27 of the same resolution, to circulate to the member States, by 31 July 2006, a compilation of the draft indicative elements and other proposals submitted by members during the sixth session, as well as any further proposals submitted by members by 30 June 2006; and, by paragraph 28 of the same resolution, invited member States to provide comments on this compilation by 31 August 2006, requesting the secretariat to circulate these comments to the member States.

II. Organizational and other matters

A. Venue and duration of the meeting

2. The meeting of the open-ended ad hoc expert group on the consideration of the content of the non-legally binding instrument on all types of forests was held at United Nations Headquarters from 11 to 15 December 2006.

B. Tasks of the open-ended ad hoc expert group

3. By paragraph 29 of its resolution 2006/49, the Economic and Social Council decided that the Forum should, within its existing resources, convene an open-ended ad hoc expert group for up to five days to consider the content of the non-legally binding instrument to assist the Forum in its deliberations, drawing on the compilation and comments referred to in paragraphs 27 and 28 of the same resolution. The Council further decided that the group should be convened in time to allow its outputs to be made available in all languages before the seventh session of the Forum and should be open to all member States, members of the organizations of the Collaborative Partnership on Forests and representatives of major groups.

C. Preparation, attendance and participation

4. Resolution 2006/49 of the Economic and Social Council contained an annex with six proposals, provided by the African Group, Australia, Brazil, Canada, the European Union and the United States of America, on possible elements for the instrument. Following the sixth session of the Forum, an additional 12 proposals were submitted by the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), Australia, Brazil, Colombia, the European Union, Indonesia, Japan, Pakistan, South Africa, Switzerland, the United States and Zimbabwe. By the time of the completion of the Note by the Secretariat on Developing a non-legally binding instrument on all types of forests, comments had been provided by Colombia, Indonesia, Pakistan, the Republic of Korea and Switzerland, and a revised proposal had been provided by the European Union. In addition, two major groups, children and youth and women, had provided inputs.

5. The open-ended ad hoc expert group was composed of experts designated by Governments of the member States of the Forum. The Government-designated experts had well-recognized scientific and technical expertise on the forest regime and the Rio conventions and knowledge of the intergovernmental forest policy deliberations of IPF, IFF and the Forum.

D. Election of officers

6. The ad hoc expert group elected Mr. Hans Hoogeveen (The Netherlands), the Chair of the Bureau of the seventh session of the Forum, as Chair of the ad hoc expert group, and His Excellency Mr. Hamidon Ali (Malaysia), Mr. André-Jules Madingou (Gabon), Mr. Cristian Maquieira (Chile), and Mr. Arvids Ozols (Latvia), members of the Bureau of the seventh session of the Forum, as vice-chairs.

E. Documentation

7. Documentation prepared for the meeting included the provisional agenda, with annotations, a Note by the Secretariat on Developing a non-legally binding instrument on all types of forests and a Compilation of proposals submitted by member States and other groups for a non-legally binding instrument on all types of forests; and, as a background document, a non-official composite draft text for a non-legally binding instrument on all types of forests. In addition, the original proposals submitted by member States and other groups, together with comments on these proposals, were also made available to experts.

8. The Note by the Secretariat on Developing a non-legally binding instrument on all types of forests, had two purposes: first, to identify and analyse common elements in the 18 proposals and 5 comments provided by the member States, as well as to identify other elements for possible inclusion; and second, to provide further elaboration of substantive, working and institutional elements for developing a non-legally binding instrument. The note includes an annex, in a tabular format, containing all the proposed elements provided by countries and regional groups. The elements were systematically compiled and elaborated through a comprehensive analysis of all of the country and regional group proposals and comments received.

9. A full list of those documents can be found in annex III to the present report.

F. Conduct of the meeting

10. In adopting its provisional agenda the participants agreed that, after the panel discussion with international experts on international law and finance, they would organize their work by giving detailed consideration to the compilation of proposals and the non-official composite draft text for a non-legally binding instrument on all types of forests that had been prepared as a background paper.

G. Summary of Panel discussion with international experts on international law and finance

11. The ad hoc expert group held a panel discussion on “International Law and Finance” on Monday 11 December 2006.

12. The panel discussion provided a forum for experts to consider the nature of non-legally binding instruments as well as opportunities for financing sustainable forest management. Ms. Daniela Simioni, Office of the UN Secretary-General, facilitated the panel discussion. Presentations were made by the following panelists: Mr. Francisco Rezek, former member of the International Court of Justice, Mr. Charles di Leva, Chief Counsel of the Environmentally and Socially Sustainable Development and International Law Practice Unit of the World Bank Legal Department, and Mr. Markku Simula, Adjunct Professor of Forest Economics at the University of Helsinki. Presentations were followed by an extensive question and answer period.

12. Ms. Simioni stressed that any new international instrument for sustainable forest management should consider the gender aspect, such as household needs of wood-fuel, employment and income opportunities for women and their involvement in reforestation and other conservation activities.

13. Mr. Rezek provided a brief history of non-legally binding agreements and what has come to be known as “soft law”. He stated that such agreements have been most often used in the fields of economics and environment where it is difficult to assess and determine rights and obligations, in other words, when dealing with third generation human rights. Provided they have the support of the international community and public opinion, there is not necessarily a difference in the effectiveness of legally and non-legally binding instruments. The Universal Declaration of Human Rights is an example of a non-legally binding instrument that contains much more prescriptive language than used in many legally binding conventions. What makes it such an important piece of international law is the importance attached to its contents. In practice, the effectiveness of various types of instruments depends upon the degree of political commitment to implementation rather than their legal nature or the strength of their language. In response to a question regarding disputes, Mr. Rezek observed that because jurisdiction is difficult to define in international law, most often, political or diplomatic means are used for dispute settlement and such means would also be most relevant for a non-legally binding instrument. He concluded by stating that the negotiation of an instrument on forests is very timely and appropriate.

14. Mr. di Leva explained that non-legally binding instruments can have a major impact on the behavior of governments and international organizations, but to be effective they must satisfy certain criteria. Typical characteristics of successful non-legally binding instruments include clarity, credibility, commitment and consensus, and continuity. Clarity helps governments and organizations understand what they need to do to achieve effective implementation. Credibility is increased if the instrument obviously addresses urgent or emerging global issues; for forests these might include climate change, illegal forest-related activities and securing wider social and environmental benefits. Commitment and consensus are needed to develop a strong global partnership; this stems from conviction, rather than the detailed wording of the instrument, and the weight of public opinion behind the instrument is a key factor affecting success. Continuity is achieved by having an effective governance structure that allows the instrument to adapt, for example in the light of fresh scientific evidence. When asked about possible subscription to an instrument, Mr. Di Leva stated that subscription creates the risk of creating two classes of participants to the agreement, with one set agreeing to go beyond the other. If subscription were to be used, it would be important to ensure that all participants agree that one group of countries should go beyond another in its implementation of the agreement.

15. Mr. Simula stated that the financing of sustainable forest management will have a critical impact on the effectiveness of any instrument. It is important to understand what needs to be financed, how much funding is needed, and what the sources of funding are, as well as the channels for disbursing funds. In practice, different types of activity (such as industrial, environmental or social forestry) are likely to require different financing strategies. The complex range of existing international financing mechanisms is not necessarily targeted specifically at sustainable forest management; some only fund activities that contribute to broader objectives, such as the Millennium Development Goals. Meanwhile, official development assistance often only plays a catalytic role. Decisions on new and increased financial resources for sustainable forest management are increasingly influenced by political priorities in host countries. Lack of political will to create enabling conditions for public and private investment can be a key constraint, but opportunities to mobilize additional resources include the creation of such conditions; capturing revenue that is lost due to illegal logging and associated trade; and payments for global and local environmental services from forests. Any new global instrument for financing of sustainable forest management should offer advantages over existing and emerging mechanisms. Sustainable forest management may also be promoted through other means, such as reducing perverse incentives that encourage deforestation and forest degradation. In response to a question regarding how to increase financing for sustainable forest management, Mr. Simula stated that increased political will could provide the catalyst.

H. Other Matters

The Participants welcomed the initiative of the Government of Indonesia to convene the Country-Led Initiative in support of the UN Forum on Forests, entitled “Multi-Year Programme of Work: Charting the Way Forward”, to be held in Bali, Indonesia in February 2007. The meeting will be co-hosted by the Government of Germany and supported by some donor countries and organizations. The participants noted the relevance and significance of that Country-Led Initiative in the development of the non-legally binding instrument.

III. Matters for the consideration of the United Nations Forum on Forests

16. Following very productive and wide-ranging discussions, the ad hoc expert group agreed to present the text contained in Annex I of this Report as a document for the Forum at its seventh session. Participants also requested the Bureau, with the assistance of the Secretariat to prepare a revised draft composite text, taking account of remarks made by experts regarding the importance of developing a clear and concise instrument, for consideration by, and to assist the Forum in its deliberations at its seventh session, translated into all official United Nations languages and made available to delegations at least one month before the start of the seventh session.

(c) Option 2: “Sustainable forest management” means the stewardship and use of forests and forest lands in a way, and at a rate, that maintains their biodiversity, productivity, regeneration capacity, vitality and their potential to fulfil, now and in the future, relevant ecological and social functions, at local, national and global levels, and that does not cause damage to other ecosystems.²⁰

(d) “Sustainably managed forest” is a forest subject to sustainable forest management.²¹

(e) “Forest”: Land spanning more than 0.5 of a hectare with trees higher than 5 metres, and a canopy cover of more than 10 percent, or trees able to reach these thresholds in situ.²²

(f) “Natural forest”: Forest stands composed predominantly of native tree species established naturally. This can include assisted natural regeneration, excluding stands that are visibly offspring/descendants of planted trees.²³

(g) “Planted forest”: Forests in which trees have been established through planting or seeding by human intervention.²⁴

(h) “Forest resources”: The natural resources found in a forest that include water, wildlife, foliage and forest floor plants²⁵, as well as in wooded land and trees outside forests.²⁶

(i) “Forest goods and services”: Wood and non-wood forest products obtained from forests, and environmental services (e.g., conservation of soil, water, biological diversity; micro and macro climatic effects; nutrient cycling) and socio-cultural services other than those provided by the production of wood and non-wood products (e.g., recreation and tourism; protection of cultural, aesthetic and scientific values) provided by forests.²⁷
