

Social Integration of Vulnerable Populations

The side event will examine the concept of social integration and its vital role in promoting and strengthening social development. The interactive panel will present social integration as it relates to migrants, trafficked persons and young people with disabilities.

Civil society representatives will present the legal and social impacts of people on the move, both on the individuals and on societies. Additionally, a civil society representative will address the social inclusion of young people suffering from a physical disability and highlight the valuable contributions persons with disabilities make to their communities. An instructor of the youths, wheel chair bound himself, will narrate his experience of assisting young people struggling to achieve social integration and to develop all of their talents and capacities.
