Background Information

From early in its history, Thessaloniki (the second-largest city in Greece) embraced the Jews who sought its hospitality. For 20 centuries, the city has been—literally and figuratively—a safe harbour for the itinerant and persecuted Jews from all over the world. As a result it was honored with the title “La Madre de Israel,” [or “mother of cities amongst the people of Israel”], as it was the most populous city of Sephardic Jewry in the world. In the summer of 1942, the persecution of the Jews of Thessaloniki started with men between the ages of 18 and 45 being conscripted for forced labour. On 15 March 1943 the Germans began deporting the Jews from Thessaloniki by the summer of 1943 sending most of them toward Auschwitz-Birkenau. By the summer of 1943 they had deported just over 46,000 Jews. Thessaloniki lost 94 percent of its Jews in the Holocaust. Today only some 1,200 remain and their story is little known. As we observe the International Day of Commemoration in Memory of the Victims of the Holocaust (27 January), our Briefing focuses on their story and features personal accounts of some of those who survived the Holocaust in Thessaloniki.
