SPORT FOR DEVELOPMENT AND PEACE

To harness the benefits of sports, the United Nations has created a movement linking the world of sports, governments and the United Nations itself in an effort to raise awareness of global issues and to promote peace and development. And it designated 2005 as the International Year of Sport and Physical Education. Since then, thousands of international sports events, conferences and over 100 new projects have been launched in 120 countries to further development, education, health, advancement of women, human rights and peace. In this edition of World Chronicle, the Special Adviser to the UN Secretary-General on Sport for Development and Peace, Adolf Ogi, discusses the significance of using sport as a means to achieve the UN Millennium Development Goals, and the challenges in building on the momentum generated by the International Year of Sport and Physical Education.
