A. Draft resolutions for adoption by the Council

1. The Commission on the Status of Women recommends to the Economic and Social Council the adoption of the following draft resolutions:

Draft resolution I Situation of women and girls in Afghanistan

The Economic and Social Council,

Guided by the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,¹ the International Covenants on Human Rights,² the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment,³ the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,⁴ the Convention on the Rights of the Child,⁵ the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women,⁶ the Beijing Declaration⁷ and Platform for Action,⁸ adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women, and other instruments of human rights and international humanitarian law,

Recalling that Afghanistan is a party to the Convention on the Prevention of the Crime of Genocide,⁹ the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,² the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights,² the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, the Convention on the Rights of the Child, and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War,¹⁰ and that it has signed the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women,

Deeply concerned about the deteriorating economic and social conditions of women and girls in all areas of Afghanistan, in particular in areas under the control of the Taliban movement, as documented by the continued and substantiated reports of grave violations of the human rights of women and girls, including all forms of discrimination against them, such as restrictions on access to health care, to many levels and types of education, to employment outside the home and, at times, to humanitarian aid, as well as restrictions on their freedom of movement,

Welcoming the ongoing work of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in Afghanistan, in particular his special focus on violations of the human rights of women and girls, especially in territories under the control of the Taliban faction,

Noting with concern the detrimental impact of these harmful conditions on the well-being of Afghan women and the children in their care,

Welcoming the inter-agency gender mission to Afghanistan in November 1997, conducted by the Special Adviser to the Secretary-General on Gender Issues and Advancement of Women, taking into account the report of the mission and hoping that the mission will serve as a model for future efforts to address the gender dimension of crisis/conflict situations,

Expressing its appreciation for the international community's support of and solidarity with the women and girls of Afghanistan, being supportive of the women of Afghanistan who protest against violations of their human rights, and encouraging women and men worldwide to continue efforts to draw attention to their situation and to promote the immediate restoration of their ability to enjoy their human rights,

1. Condemns the continuing grave violations of the human rights of women and girls, including all forms of discrimination against them, in all areas of

5. Encourages the continuing efforts of the United Nations, international and non-governmental organizations and donors to ensure that all United Nations-assisted programmes in Afghanistan are formulated and coordinated in such a way as to promote and ensure the participation of women in those programmes and that women benefit equally with men from such programmes;

6. Appeals to all States and to the international community to ensure that all humanitarian assistance to the people of Afghanistan, in conformity with the Strategic Framework for Afghanistan, is based on the principle of non-discrimination, integrates a gender perspective, and actively attempts to promote the participation of both women and men and to promote peace and respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms;

Draft resolution II
Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women*

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the section concerning the situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by organizations of the United Nations system of the report of the Secretary-General¹¹ on follow-up to and implementation of the Beijing Declaration¹² and Platform for Action,¹³

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women,¹⁴ in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and

Also recalling its resolution 1999/15 of 28 July 1999 and other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Concerned about the continuing difficult situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including Jerusalem, and about the severe consequences of continuous illegal Israeli settlement activities, as well as the harsh economic conditions and other consequences for the situation of Palestinian women and their families resulting from the frequent closures and isolation of the occupied territory,

1. Calls upon the concerned parties, as well as the entire international community, to exert all the necessary efforts to ensure the continuity and success of the peace process and its conclusion by the agreed time of September 2000 and the achievement of tangible progress in the improvement of the situation of Palestinian women and their families;

C. Matters brought to the attention of the Council

Resolution 44/1. Release of women and children taken hostage, including those subsequently imprisoned, in armed conflicts*

The Commission on the Status of Women,

Recalling its resolutions 39/2 of 31 March 1995, 40/1 of 22 March 1996, 41/1 of 21 March 1997, 42/2 of 13 March 1998 and 43/1 of 12 March 1999,

Recalling also the relevant provisions contained in the instruments of international humanitarian law relative to the protection of women and children in areas of armed conflict,

Welcoming the adoption of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women,¹⁹ including the provisions regarding violence against women and children,

Expressing grave concern at the continuation of armed conflicts in many regions throughout the world and the human suffering and humanitarian emergencies they have caused,

Emphasizing that all forms of violence committed against the civilian population, including women and children in areas of armed conflict, including capturing them as hostages, seriously contravene international humanitarian law, in particular the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 for the protection of victims of war,²⁰

Expressing its strong belief that the rapid and unconditional release of women and children taken hostage in areas of armed conflict will promote the implementation of the noble goals enshrined in the Beijing Declaration and the Platform for Action,

1. Condemns violent acts in contravention of international humanitarian law against civilian women and children in areas of armed conflict, and calls for an effective response to such acts, including the immediate release of such women and children taken hostage, including those subsequently imprisoned, in armed conflicts;

2. Strongly urges all parties to armed conflicts to respect fully the norms of international humanitarian law in armed conflict and to take all necessary measures for the protection of these women and children and for their immediate release;

4. Requests the Secretary-General and all relevant international organizations to use their capabilities and efforts to facilitate the release of these women and children;

Resolution 44/2. Women, the girl child and human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome*

The Commission on the Status of Women,

Recognizing that women play a vital role in the social and economic development of their countries and, therefore, profoundly concerned by the fact that out of 33.6 million people living with human immunodeficiency virus/acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (HIV/AIDS) today, women now represent 46 per cent of all people over the age of 15 living with HIV and AIDS,

Noting with great concern that the proportion of women becoming infected with HIV is growing in every region, that in sub-Saharan Africa 55 per cent of those living with HIV are women and that, in the younger age brackets (15-24 years), girls are at higher risk of HIV infection and that more girls than boys are now infected and, in this context, welcoming the newly launched international partnership against AIDS in Africa,

Recognizing that gender inequalities begin early in life and can render women and the girl child unable to protect their sexual and reproductive health, thus increasing their risk and vulnerability to HIV infection,

Mindful that the majority of women and the girl child in most developing countries do not enjoy full social and economic rights, such as education, health care and welfare, and therefore suffer disproportionately from the consequences of the HIV/AIDS epidemic, particularly in the economic and social spheres,

Recognizing that women, who constitute the majority of the poor, are especially vulnerable to HIV infection because of their subordinate status in society, in the household and in communities and because of their restricted access to education, gainful employment and health and information services,

Also recognizing that women, in particular young girls, are physiologically and biologically more vulnerable than men to sexually transmitted diseases, including HIV, and yet receive minimal health care and support when infected,

Noting with concern that approximately 80 per cent of the infected women have been infected through unprotected sex with an infected male partner, and acknowledging therefore that men have a shared responsibility towards protecting their own and women's sexual health,

Acknowledging that millions of women do not have access to means that have proved effective in preventing and lowering infection rates, such as male and female condoms, anti-retroviral drugs, relevant preventive education, acceptable counselling and testing services,

Noting with appreciation the efforts of the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS and its co-sponsoring organizations, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Population Fund, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the World Health Organization and the World Bank, to empower women through capacity development programmes, as well as programmes that provide women with access to development resources and strengthen their networks which offer care and support to women affected by HIV/AIDS,

1. Reaffirms the rights of women and the girl child infected and affected by HIV/AIDS to have access to health, education and social services and to be protected from all forms of discrimination, stigma, abuse and neglect;

2. Also reaffirms the human rights of girls and women to equal access to education, skills training and employment opportunities as a means to reduce their vulnerability to HIV infection;

3. Urges Governments to take all necessary measures to strengthen women's economic independence and to protect and promote their human rights and fundamental freedoms in order to allow them to better protect themselves from HIV infection;

4. Emphasizes that the advancement and empowerment of women is critical to increasing the ability of women and young girls to protect themselves from HIV infection;

5. Stresses that every effort should be made by Governments, relevant United Nations agencies, funds and programmes and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, individually and collectively, to place combating HIV/AIDS as a priority on the development agenda and to implement effective prevention strategies and programmes, especially for the most vulnerable populations, including women, young girls and infants, also taking into account prevention of mother-to-child transmission of HIV;

* For the discussion, see chap. II.

6. Calls upon the international community, relevant United Nations agencies, funds and programmes and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to intensify their support of national efforts against HIV/AIDS, particularly in favour of women and young girls, in the worst-hit regions of Africa and where the epidemic is severely setting back national development gains;

7. Urges Governments to take steps to create an environment that promotes compassion and support for those infected with HIV, to provide the legal framework that will protect the rights of people living with HIV/AIDS, to enable those who are vulnerable to have access to appropriate voluntary counselling services and to encourage efforts to reduce discrimination and stigmatization;

8. Also urges Governments, with the assistance of relevant United Nations agencies, funds and programmes and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to create an environment and conditions that will take care of and support children orphaned by AIDS;

9. Encourages Governments to recognize the challenges facing girls and women, particularly older women, who are primary caregivers for people living with HIV/AIDS, and to provide them with the necessary economic and psychosocial support;

10. Further urges Governments, with the assistance of relevant United Nations agencies, funds and programmes, to adopt a long-term, timely, coherent and integrated AIDS prevention policy, with public information and life-skills-based education programmes specifically tailored to the needs of women and girls within their sociocultural contexts and sensitivities and the specific needs in their life cycle;

11. Encourages Governments and civil society to support women's groups and community organizations in changing harmful traditions and practices affecting the health of women and girls and to take steps to eliminate all forms of violence against women, including rape and sexual coercion, which aggravate the conditions fostering the spread of the epidemic;

12. Encourages accelerated research on vaccine development and intensified additional research on promotion of the female condom, microbicides and other options that offer women more control over the protection of their reproductive and sexual health;

13. Requests Governments to ensure that condoms and care for sexually transmitted diseases are available in places accessible and affordable to women while ensuring their privacy;

14. Also requests Governments to provide comprehensive health care for women with HIV, including treatment for opportunistic diseases and reproductive health services;

15. Reaffirms the value of the coordination by the Joint United Nations Programme on Human Immunodeficiency Virus/Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome and calls upon all elements of the United Nations to examine their programmes of work to see how and where combating HIV/AIDS, especially among women and children, can be incorporated into their activities;

16. Welcomes the efforts of the Joint United Nations Programme on Human Immunodeficiency Virus/Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome in promoting sexual and reproductive health education for young people, in particular girls, while encouraging them to delay sexual initiation, and, in this context, urges that greater attention be given to the education of men and boys about their roles and their responsibilities in preventing the transmission of sexually transmitted diseases, including HIV/AIDS, to their partners;

17. Urges the Joint United Nations Programme and its co-sponsors to intensify their efforts in assisting Governments to determine the best policies and programmes to prevent women and young girls from becoming infected with HIV/AIDS;

18. Requests the Joint Programme and its co-sponsors, bilateral and multilateral donors and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, in their efforts to prevent HIV infection, to give urgent and priority attention to the situation of women and girls in Africa;

19. Invites the relevant entities of the United Nations system, including agencies, funds and programmes, to mainstream gender policies and programmes integrating HIV/AIDS activities;

20. Takes note with appreciation of section III.C of the report of the Secretary-General on the follow-up to and implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action,²¹ on women, the girl child and HIV/AIDS, and invites the Secretary-General to report to the Commission on the Status of Women at its forty-fifth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Report of the Working Group on Communications on the Status of Women

51. At the 7th meeting (a closed meeting), on 2 March, the Commission considered the report of the Working Group on Communications on the Status of Women (E/CN.6/2000/CRP.4).

52. At the same meeting, the Commission took note of the report of the Working Group and agreed to include it in the report of the Commission. The report of the Working Group is as follows:

“1. The Working Group on Communications on the Status of Women was guided in its deliberations by the mandate given by the Economic and Social Council in its resolution 76 (V) of 5 August 1947, as amended by the Council in resolutions 304 I (XI) of 14 and 17 July 1950 and 1983/27 of 26 May 1983.

“2. The Working Group considered the list of confidential communications (E/CN.6/2000/SW/COMM.LIST/34 and Add.1 and 2) and of non-confidential communications (E/CN.6/2000/CR.36) concerning the status of women.

“3. The Working Group took note of the 25 confidential communications and 4 non-confidential communications received directly by the Division for the Advancement of Women of the United Nations Secretariat and of the 44 confidential communications received by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights of the United Nations Office at Geneva. It also took note of the fact that no confidential communications had been received by other United Nations bodies or specialized agencies.

“4. The Working Group expressed its deep concern in relation to the continuing grave violations of women’s human rights, including civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights, and the persistent and pervasive discrimination against women.

“5. The Working Group was concerned at the continuing abusive treatment of women, including torture, rape, custodial deaths, abduction, disappearances, arbitrary arrests, and harassment by security forces, including military and police forces, or by other governmental authorities, particularly where separatist movements had been reported.

“6. The Working Group was concerned by the persistent targeting of civilians, especially women and children, and the fact that internally displaced persons were subject to torture, floggings, confiscation of property, harassment and forcible evictions in conflict situations. The Working Group also noted with concern discrimination against women in respect of their access to international humanitarian aid.

“7. The Working Group noted with concern the failure of Governments in times of political instability to protect civilians, including women and children, who were victims of violations of human rights, including massacres, death threats, torture, rape, disappearances, kidnapping (of young girls) and arbitrary detention. The Working Group also noted with concern the failure of Governments to punish those responsible for the violations.

“8. The Working Group was gravely concerned by the more than 8,000 communications regarding gross violations of all of the basic human rights of women in one case. They included violations of civil and political rights and of economic, social and cultural rights — specifically, freedom of movement and religion and the equal right to work, education and health. The Working Group was also concerned by communications regarding women’s dependence on men, and the increase of suicides and severe depression among women.

“9. The Working Group was further gravely concerned by communications in that case regarding particularly degrading and inhuman punishment which had sometimes resulted in death. The Working Group also noted with deep concern that women were beaten for ‘disobedience’, tortured, shot and burned alive, and that such acts constituted flagrant violations of the right to life.

“10. The Working Group noted with deep concern the failure of Governments to protect the rights of ethnic and religious minority women, particularly during times of civil unrest and riot and in post-conflict situations. It also expressed concerns about cases including murder, destruction of property of religious institutions, systematic campaign of threats, intimidation of people of other faiths and racism. It further noted the discrimination against minorities, in particular the denial of their rights to political participation, and the denial of rights to equal access to governmental employment, education and health care.

“11. The Working Group noted with concern the continued discrimination against indigenous groups, in particular women and children. It also noted with concern the increasing number of cases of arbitrary killing, detention, torture, rape and forced disappearances. The Working Group further expressed its concern about the harassment of organizations of indigenous people and the death threats that they received.

“12. The Working Group was concerned at the allegations of the violations of the human rights of women, including widespread arbitrary arrest, use of excessive force during arrests, prolonged administrative detention, detention of minors, torture and ill-treatment, imprisonment of the mentally ill, and overcrowding of prisons. The Working Group also noted with concern unfair trials and forcible exile of political opponents, and the abusive treatment of their spouses, children and other relatives.

“13. The Working Group further noted with concern the ongoing harassment, including acts of violence, intimidation and death threats, of human rights defenders by members of the police and other authority figures. The Working Group was also concerned by the lack of investigation by authorities in cases where the safety and freedom of human rights defenders, members of non-governmental organizations and women activists had been threatened.

“14. The Working Group also expressed its concern about alleged cases of violation of the right to freedom of expression and movement. As a consequence, women had suffered arbitrary arrest, detention, harassment and threats.

“15. The Working Group was deeply concerned about the continuing de facto discriminatory treatment of certain social groups, including women, reflected by limitations on their full participation in public life, educational choices and employment opportunities and by alleged child slavery and prostitution.

“16. The Working Group noted with concern remaining discriminatory provisions against women in national legal systems. It also noted the effect of corruption on the administration of justice.

“17. The Working Group took note of cases referring to difficulties that women experienced in exercising their right to family reunification.

“18. In considering the non-confidential communications, the Working Group recognized the urgent need to implement the commitments made in regard to the human rights of women by the international community at the World Conference on Human Rights and the Fourth World Conference on Women. In addition, the Working Group was also concerned that women and children continued to be the primary victims of armed conflicts.

“19. The Working Group expressed appreciation to those Governments that had sent replies conducive to the clarification of the cases concerned. It noted, however, that some Governments had not replied and that some confidential communications were not accompanied by their corresponding replies, although some Governments had sent their replies to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights. The Working Group urged the Commission to encourage all Governments concerned to send their replies in due time and to cooperate in order to improve the communication mechanism.

“20. In view of the review by the Commission on Human Rights of its mechanisms, including the 1503 procedure, the Working Group suggested that the Commission on the Status of Women request the Secretary-General to submit a report to its next session containing an overview of any reform measures which may be adopted by the Commission on Human Rights and the implications of these measures for the work of the Commission on the Status of Women under its communications procedure. The Working Group therefore recommended that the Commission on the Status of Women include an item in the agenda for its forty-fifth session under which to consider this issue.”

Annex I

Moderator's summary of the panel discussion on emerging issues, trends and new approaches to issues affecting the situation of women or equality between women and men (agenda item 3 (b))

1. On 1 March 2000, the Commission held a panel discussion at its fifth meeting, followed by a dialogue between the panellists, Member States and representatives of non-governmental organizations, on emerging issues, trends and new approaches to issues affecting women or equality between women and men. The panellists were: Dominique Meda (France), Inspecteur a l'Inspection Generale des Affaires Sociales, who discussed the relationship of work and of social life with regard to its gender equality implications in developed countries; Mame Bassine Niang (Senegal), Ministère de la Famille, de l'Action Sociale, et de la Solidarité Nationale, who discussed women's human rights and access to resources, especially in conjunction with family and personal status codes, and land, ownership and inheritance rights; Gillian Marcelle, Chairperson, African Information Society Gender Working Group, who discussed challenges and opportunities for strengthening gender justice in connection with information and communications technologies; Charlotte Abaka, Member of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, who discussed progress made and challenges in the implementation of the Platform for Action as monitored by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women; and Madhu Bala Nath, Gender and HIV/AIDS Adviser to the Joint United Nations Programme on Human Immunodeficiency Virus/Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome and the United Nations Development Fund for Women, who highlighted issues related to women living with HIV/AIDS.

2. During the discussion it was noted that women's economic empowerment was essential to the achievement of gender equality. The economy had not yet adapted to the reality of women's participation in the world of work. Rather than constituting a challenge, women's participation brought benefits to the economy and should be embraced as an opportunity in a fast-changing environment. Women's capacities were seen as assets and of economic advantage in the emerging knowledge economy. Positive economic experiences gained through employing women could be applied to other areas, such as in addressing the persistent wage gap between women and men, which was largely based on discrimination against women and women's concentration in certain sectors. It was emphasized that policies to create part-time work for women were unsuccessful, further marginalized women and reinforced unfair labour situations at lower pay and fewer benefits. Therefore, policies on part-time work needed to target both women and men. Such policies also should aim to strengthen families, and to allow women and men better to balance work and family responsibilities.

3. The impact of economic globalization on the situation of women was raised. Some of its effects were seen as having aggravated women's poverty in developing countries, and as constituting an obstacle to the realization of gender equality. Effective international cooperation and the support of developed countries for women in developing countries were required to address these effects. It was also noted that globalization brought opportunities for women, and could lead to better distribution of work.

4. With regard to information and communications technologies, speakers called for a focus on the situation in developing countries, where access to such goods was precarious, and its use low. Efforts were needed to increase the use of available capacity, as well as to increase its multiplier effect. Women's groups and networks could derive great benefits from such technologies through increased information and exchange and better networking. Greater attention to the role of public policy with regard to the use of information and communications technologies was urged, as the role of public policies, especially in poor countries, was critical in determining rules of access and benefits. Such processes could potentially have a major contribution to gender equality issues in conjunction with information and communications technologies, and several Governments had taken on gender equality issues in their telecommunications legislation. There remained a great need for capacity-building on policy-making in information and communications technologies, especially on how to use the gender-mainstreaming strategy. Efforts at increased gender equality awareness were needed with regard to the development, as well as the use, of such new technologies. Young women should be a particular focus.

5. The limited capacity of national machinery to implement the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women remained a challenge, as well as the limited capacity of non-governmental organizations to monitor implementation. Budgetary provisions were needed for national machineries, and donor resources should be made available to national machineries and to non-governmental organizations. It was noted that women continued to have fewer rights than men, and that their rights were often not commensurate with their responsibilities. The continuing parallel existence and use of statutory law and contradictory customary rules with regard to many aspects of family and personal status issues was raised. Women's rights should form an integral part of all government policy, and non-governmental organizations had a continuing role in raising awareness and facilitation of change in this area. There was also a gap between Governments' commitment in international forums to women's human rights, and their practical realization at the domestic level, especially in areas such as poor women's right to land, land tenure, and property. Women's inheritance and succession rights also remained precarious. Timetables and benchmarks for the realization of such rights were therefore necessary. Governments were urged to adopt such laws, and to enforce them. Furthermore, rural women's knowledge of their rights and availability of legal aid remained insufficient and needed further strengthening.

6. While some progress had been made, the persistence of violence against women, and its effects on women's lives, required further attention. While the issue now formed part of the international agenda, women in many parts of the world still lacked the capacity and support to speak out against violence, especially domestic violence. The work of non-governmental organizations had been critical in making violence against women a public issue and a societal responsibility. Further efforts were needed to raise the awareness of the negative impact of such violence on families as a whole. General Recommendation Number 19 of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women on violence against women provided essential guidance on governmental responsibility for addressing violence against women in all its forms. Regional efforts at norm setting, such as the Inter-American Convention on the Prevention, Punishment and Eradication of Violence against Women, were mentioned. Difficulties in collecting comprehensive and comparable data on violence against women, particularly in domestic violence, were pointed out, and the need to continue efforts for the development of a working methodology for the collection of such data emphasized. Trafficking in women had emerged as an area deserving of special attention.

7. With regard to women and HIV/AIDS, the particular situation of women in Africa was raised. Efforts to encourage pharmaceutical companies to undertake social support programmes for women unable to afford expensive medication were urged. It was noted that spouses of migrant workers were particularly exposed to the risk of infection. The absence of comprehensive social security systems in Africa put additional burden on family care systems.

8. The life cycle approach underlying the Platform for Action required better implementation. Particular efforts were called for to address the needs of young women, and their inclusion in policy-making processes. Issues such as early pregnancy, use of contraceptive methods and safe abortion deserved particular attention.

9. Gender mainstreaming remained alien to many who needed to contribute to its implementation and thus needed to be addressed in all future actions, including through the use of tools such as gender analysis, training and cooperation.

10. The involvement of women and men, in relation to all topics raised during the panel discussion, was required. Similarly, the inadequacy of resources allocated for actions to implement the Platform needed to be addressed in all future actions.
