The project aims to strengthen environmental data management and monitoring in Haiti through:

- Development of the SI-APRI system and integration of a pilot Land Degradation Neutrality (LDN) monitoring component under the project "Enabling Large-Scale Ecosystem Restoration in Haiti through the Piloting and Implementation of Payments for Environmental Services Schemes."
- Consolidation of the National Environmental Information System (NEIS) to improve data interoperability and institutional capacities.
- Establishment of landscape-level information systems in the South and Grand-Anse regions.
- Enhancement of real-time environmental monitoring using satellite data, web platforms, and GIS tools.
- Support for evidence-based decision-making, improved coordination among stakeholders, and strengthened national reporting on LDN and related environmental indicators.

These efforts collectively promote sustainable land management, ecosystem restoration, and resilience in Haiti's vulnerable landscapes.
