The Conference aims to express solidarity with all victims of terrorism around the world and review progress on the international victims of terrorism agenda, as a direct outcome of the United Nations Global Congress of Victims of Terrorism held in New York in 2022.

Held under the theme “Education as a Tool for Prevention, Peacebuilding and Empowerment of Victims of Terrorism,” the International Conference is gathering over 400 participants, including 66 Member States, 59 victims of terrorism and victims' associations and numerous UN representatives to discuss the role of victims and survivors of terrorism as educators, peacebuilders and agents for change.

They called for greater support for victims of terrorism, emphasizing the importance of education “not as an option, but as a right”, especially in a context where disinformation and a lack of opportunities can fuel violent extremism conducive to terrorism. The importance of including victims' voices in policies and strategies to prevent and counter terrorism was emphasized, along with a powerful reminder to Member States and organizations present that “supporting victims is an integral part of building peace”.

Their call was echoed by His Majesty King Felipe VI of Spain, who thanked them for their powerful and moving testimonies. “Through your pain and grief – which, we all ought to share – you embody true bravery and dignity,” he stated.

The United Nations' Under-Secretary-General for Counter-Terrorism, Vladimir Voronkov, expressed his hope that the conference will “stimulate a vision for a strengthened, responsive, and fit-for-purpose victims of terrorism agenda. We must all rise to the occasion. We owe it to victims and survivors of terrorism to provide the support they need to heal and rebuild their lives,” he said.
