The State of Israel's Anti-Piracy Legislation

Further to the UN Secretariat's letter dated 8 January 2010, below is an overview of Israel's domestic legislation currently in effect pertaining to piracy:

- Section 169 of Israel's Penal Law, 1977, explicitly criminalizes acts of piracy, as follows:

  "Piracy. 169. A person who commits piracy or any act connected with or akin to piracy is liable to imprisonment for twenty years".

- Israel's Maritime Law (Offenses Against the Safety of International Maritime Navigation and Maritime Installations), 2008, is another national law that can be used to combat piracy. This law was enacted in order to incorporate the provisions of the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts Against the Safety of Maritime Navigation, 1988 (the "Convention"), and of the Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts Against the Safety of Fixed Platforms Located on the Continental Shelf, 1988 (the "Protocol"), into Israeli domestic law. Israel became a party to both the Convention and Protocol in 2009. Under the said Israeli law, the seizure by force of a vessel or of a fixed maritime platform, or the threat to take control by force of such, are offenses punishable by 20 years' imprisonment (Section 3 of the law). Furthermore, under the said law, the following offenses are punishable by 15 years' imprisonment: an attack of a person aboard a vessel; an act that causes injury to the vessel or its cargo; the carrying on board of a device or materials that are likely to cause injury to the vessel or its cargo; damaging navigation equipment; conveying false information for the purpose of interfering with the safe navigation of the vessel; attacking a person upon a fixed maritime platform; causing injury to a fixed maritime platform; or bringing aboard a fixed maritime platform a device or materials that are likely to cause injury to such platform. If the attack of a person aboard a vessel or aboard a fixed maritime platform causes death or serious injury, such offence is punishable by 25 years' imprisonment. All of the offences described above may be perpetrated in the course of an act of piracy, and thus this law is an effective tool for combating piracy.

Under the Maritime Law (Offenses Against the Safety of International Maritime Navigation and Maritime Installations), 2008, the master is authorized to request from a person who has perpetrated the above crimes or who threatens to perpetrate the above crimes, their identifying information; to interrogate such person; to detain such person; to search such person or the vessel; to seize any item which may threaten the safety of the vessel; and even to arrest such person, if there is reason to believe that such person threatens the safety of the vessel or might try to escape. If the master detains or arrests such person, the master is to notify the owner of the vessel immediately of such, who, in turn is to contact the police. The police may either order the person's release, in light of the circumstances, or is to notify the country of the person's citizenship or residence of his or her detention or arrest. The police are also to order the vessel's owner to either submit the detained person to the relevant authorities of a country that is a party to the Convention, or to submit the person to Israeli authorities in order to prosecute such person.

- In this context, it is also worth noting that Israel's Prohibition on Money Laundering Law, 2000, (hereinafter, the "PML") prohibits the laundering of monies that were derived from certain offences, as enumerated in the First Schedule of the law. Such list of offenses includes the crime of piracy, as defined under Israel's Penal Law (see above). Under Section 3(a) of the PML, the holding, sale, receipt, transfer, brokerage, etc. of property originating from, or used for, such aforementioned offences (including piracy), with the intent to conceal the source, owners, location, movements, or acts relating to such property, or with the knowledge that such property is related to such offences, is an offence punishable by fines of up to NIS 4,040,000 and imprisonment of up to 10 years. Furthermore, under Section 4 of the PML, the holding, sale, receipt, transfer, brokerage, etc. of property by a person who knows, or suspects, that the property was originated from, or used for, the aforementioned offenses listed in the law, including acts of piracy, is an act punishable by fines of up to NIS 2,020,000 and imprisonment of up to 7 years. The relevant sections of the PML are set forth below:
