9:10 – 11:00	Panel I: Accelerating infrastructure investments for a sustainable and resilient recovery and restoring trade Despite growing momentum for investment in sustainable development, the world has not seen investment at scale in sustainable development, particularly in the most critical sectors and in countries in special situations where investment is needed the most. Investment in sustainable infrastructure has been vastly insufficient, particularly in these countries. The situation has worsened due to the outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic, which resulted in a drop in investment. The Pandemic has also revealed the critical nature of sustainable infrastructure investments for the achievement of the 2030 agenda through employment, connectivity, supply chains, and availability of essential services. The pandemic has also driven a large decline in trade. Against this backdrop, stronger domestic and international public policy measures are needed to increase the supply of long-term investment for sustainable development and channel it to where it is needed, including in infrastructure. Policymakers also need to take proactive measures to mitigate pandemic-related trade risks, support trade facilitation and logistics, and implement trade policies in support of the most vulnerable countries and populations. This session will examine concrete ways to unlock investment in supporting resilient and sustainable recovery. Chair: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • H.E. 9:00 – 10:30	Panel II: Developing durable solutions to recurrent debt crises Growing debt levels are hampering implementation of the 2030 Agenda in a growing number of countries across the globe. The pandemic has exacerbated the debt challenges in many developing countries. Debt relief measures in response to the pandemic such as the DSSI by the G20 provided breathing space for eligible countries, but more durable solutions are urgently needed to prevent and resolve debt crises and retain fiscal space for SDG investments. Fiscal challenges also highlight the need to expand concessional finance for the most vulnerable countries. This session will examine both immediate additional steps, as well as longer-term solutions. Moderator: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Mr. Jeremy I. Bulow, Professor, Economics at Stanford Business School Keynote Address: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Ms. Jutta Urpilainen, European Commissioner on International Partnerships Panelists: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • H.E. 	Guiding questions: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Beyond the immediate steps already taken, what additional measures can help address the debt vulnerabilities of both DSSI eligible countries and other vulnerable countries? • How can we improve arrangements for sovereign debt restructuring? What steps can we take toward a global consensus-based, inclusive and multilateral framework? • As many development cooperation providers face their own economic and related challenges as the result of the pandemic, how can access to ODA and concessional finance be strengthened for developing countries with the greatest needs and least resources and capacities?
10:30 – 12:00	Panel III: Strengthening private creditor and credit rating agencies contribution to pandemic response and recovery Private creditors participation in debt relief initiatives such as DSSI has been insufficient, in part because eligible countries were concerned about the impact of requesting private creditors participation on their sovereign ratings. Official creditors cautioned that the lack of participation of private creditors may compromise their efforts to create breathing space for the most vulnerable countries. More broadly, the methods and procyclicality of credit ratings have long been debated. The action of countries striving to maintain their rating grades through tight macroeconomic policies are often counterproductive for long-term investment and growth. This session will examine how public and private actors can work together to facilitate the contribution of private creditors and credit rating agencies to developing countries' crisis response. Moderator: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Mr. Mark Plant, Chief Operating Officer of CGD Europe, Co-Director of Development Finance, and Senior Policy Fellow , Center for Global Development Panelists: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • H.E. 12:00-13:00	Panel IV: Unlocking liquidity to support sustainable development, especially for the most vulnerable countries Extreme market volatility, drops in investment and other external finance as well as weakened economic activities are taking place against the backdrop of heightened demand for liquidity to address the crisis. While providing vital liquidity, existing liquidity support is not sufficient. Proposals have been made to help developing countries meet their liquidity needs, which require different levels of political commitments. This session will help examine different proposals and discuss the viable way forward to advance these proposals. Moderator: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Mr. Adnan Mazarei, Peterson Institute for International Economics Panelists: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • H.E. 9:00 – 10:30

Panel V: Walking the talk on Illicit Financial Flows: Actions to achieve tangible progress

In order to expand the fiscal space for countries to invest in immediate crisis needs and recovery efforts, without creating extra pressure on compliant taxpayers, it is more urgent than ever to combat illicit financial flows. Given the globalized nature of business and finance, there are however limits to what countries can do on their own through domestic policies. It is therefore important to strengthen international cooperation in this area and ensure that it is universal in scope and approach and takes into account the different needs and situations of all countries. These efforts require significant political will, as well as complementary efforts at all levels. This session will discuss ways to strengthen cooperation of existing forums and advance policy options to address IFFs comprehensively. It will also be an opportunity to share the findings of the final report of the FACTI panel.

Panel VI: Building the economy of the future that is climate-resilient and aligned with the SDGs

The massive disruptions caused by COVID-19 has triggered a rethink of the type of society and economy needed to better prepare the world against future shocks. The 2030 Agenda and the Paris Agreement provide global frameworks towards this objective. The transition requires policy makers and private actors to expedite green and digital transformations. Public policies and public spending need to be oriented towards building a social contract that ensures equal access to opportunities, leaving no one behind. Social protection for all must be part of the solution. Many developing countries cannot achieve the transition without addressing the structural challenges that they face in access to finance and technology. The UN system has taken concrete measures in helping countries overcome the complex challenges posed by the pandemic. The UN can play a unique role in facilitating countries' transition, capitalizing on its convening power, wide-ranging policy expertise and operational activities.
