Summary

The forty-first session of the Commission on Population and Development was held at United Nations Headquarters on 13 April 2007 and from 7 to 11 April 2008. Its special theme was “Population distribution, urbanization, internal migration and development”.

The documents before the Commission included the report of the Secretary-General on world population monitoring, focusing on the special theme. The report reviewed trends in and prospects for urban and rural population growth and changes in the population of cities. It discussed the relative contribution of natural increase and the combination of rural-urban migration and reclassification to the growth of the urban population. It considered the relative importance of different types of internal migration and described the implications of population distribution for urban and rural dependency ratios. It documented the impact of urbanization on poverty reduction and reviewed current knowledge on differentials in access to services and demographic behaviour in relation to urban or rural residence, giving particular attention to outcomes for the urban poor. The report also documented major policy developments in regard to population distribution and underscored the importance of urbanization for economic growth and human well-being, concluding that urbanization’s positive aspects should be leveraged while working to prevent or minimize its ills.

The Commission also considered the report of the Bureau of the Commission on its intersessional meetings and a report of the Secretary-General on the monitoring of population programmes, focusing on population distribution, urbanization, internal migration and development. Another report considered by the Commission focused on the flow of financial resources for assisting in the implementation of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development; that report showed that, although donor assistance had been growing over the past few years, the increase was mostly the result of higher funding for HIV/AIDS activities. Lastly, the Commission reviewed the implementation of the programme of work of the Population Division of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs in 2007 and a note by the Secretary-General on subprogramme 6, Population, of programme 7, Economic and social affairs, of the proposed strategic framework for the period 2010-2011.

The Commission heard keynote addresses by David Satterthwaite, Senior Fellow, Human Settlements Programme, International Institute for Environment and Development, London; Mark Montgomery, Senior Associate, Policy Research Division, Population Council, New York; Helen Zille, Mayor, Cape Town, South Africa; and Eduardo Moreno, Chief, Global Urban Observatory, United Nations Human Settlements Programme, Nairobi.

In its consideration of actions to follow up the recommendations of the International Conference on Population and Development, the Commission decided that the theme of its forty-third session, to be held in 2010, would be “Health, morbidity, mortality and development”. The Commission also adopted a resolution on national, regional and international action on the subject of population distribution, urbanization, internal migration and development. In that resolution, the Commission recognized that the world population was undergoing a historic and unprecedented transformation from being mostly rural to being predominantly urban, with major disparities in the level of urbanization remaining among regions and countries. With the number of urban dwellers in developing countries growing significantly, future population growth would be concentrated primarily in the urban areas of developing countries, particularly in small and medium-sized cities. The Commission considered that the rapid urbanization of the world's population required integrated and participatory approaches to spatial management, including through coordinated action between national Governments and local authorities, with the support of the international community. In this regard, the resolution urged Governments to promote linkages between urban and rural areas in recognition of their economic, social and environmental interdependence. In the same resolution, the Commission called upon Governments to address the challenges and opportunities of urban growth and internal migration by taking prompt, forward-looking and sustained action to ensure that those phenomena would have a positive impact on economic growth, poverty eradication and environmental sustainability and, in doing so, to enable the participation and representation of all relevant stakeholders in planning for an urban future. The resolution also called upon the international community to support the efforts of developing countries in this regard, including through building capacities to respond to these challenges and opportunities.

The Commission heard a statement by the President of the Economic and Social Council on the new functions of the Council (relating to the annual ministerial review and the Development Cooperation Forum) and the opportunities arising from those new functions for further interaction between the Council and the Commission on Population and Development. The statement was followed by an informal dialogue with members of the Commission.

The Commission also approved the draft provisional agenda for its forty-second session and adopted the report on its forty-first session.

urban, but that major disparities in the level of urbanization remain among regions and countries, with Africa and Asia still being mostly rural and other regions being highly urbanized, and therefore that this transformation requires integrated and participatory approaches to spatial management, including through coordinated action between national Governments and local authorities, with the support of the international community,

Recognizing further the negative impact of environmental degradation, including climate change, on population distribution, internal migration, urbanization and development, as well as the challenges that rural and urban transformations carry for environmental sustainability,

Noting that the number of urban dwellers in developing countries is growing significantly and that future population growth will be concentrated primarily in the urban areas of developing countries, particularly in small and medium-sized cities,

Recognizing that natural increase, internal migration and the reclassification of rural areas as urban contribute to urban population growth,

Recognizing also that the levels of poverty are highest in rural areas, that poverty levels are increasing in the urban areas of some developing countries and that the urban poor are especially vulnerable and often have no other option but to live in slums, which are characterized by overcrowded conditions, unsafe housing, crime and other social problems, and lack of access to improved water sources, sanitation and health services,

Recognizing further that in developing countries, there are differences among urban settings regarding access to social services,

Recalling the commitment to achieve universal access to reproductive health by 2015, as set out at the International Conference on Population and Development, integrating this goal in strategies to attain the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, aimed at reducing maternal mortality, improving maternal health, reducing child mortality, promoting gender equality, combating HIV/AIDS and eradicating poverty,

Taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General on world population monitoring<sup>19</sup> and on the monitoring of population programmes,<sup>20</sup> both of which focus on population distribution, urbanization, internal migration and development, and taking note also of the report of the Secretary-General on the flow of financial resources for assisting in the implementation of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development,<sup>21</sup>

Acknowledging that for developing countries that cannot generate sufficient resources, the lack of adequate funding remains the chief constraint to the full implementation of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development, and urging the international community, including Governments of both donors and developing countries, to continue to mobilize the required resources for the full implementation of the Programme of Action, taking into consideration current needs,

Recognizing that poverty, unemployment, hunger and malnutrition are some of the major causes of migration from rural to urban areas in many developing countries,

Affirming that all States and all people should cooperate to eradicate poverty and attain sustainable development in order to decrease disparities in standards of living and better meet the needs of the majority of the people of the world,

1. Reaffirms the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development<sup>3</sup> and the key actions for its further implementation;<sup>4</sup>

2. Calls upon Governments, in formulating population distribution policies, to ensure that their objectives and goals are consistent with internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, all human rights and fundamental freedoms, the eradication of poverty in both urban and rural areas, the promotion of gender equality, equity and empowerment of women and environmental sustainability;

3. Reaffirms the commitments to, and emphasizes the need to fully implement, the global partnership for development set out in the United Nations Millennium Declaration,<sup>5</sup> the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development<sup>16</sup> and the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit for Sustainable Development (“Johannesburg Plan of Implementation”),<sup>11</sup> and to enhance the momentum generated by the 2005 World Summit in order to operationalize and implement, at all levels, the commitments set out in the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits, including the 2005 World Summit, in the economic, social and related fields;

4. Calls upon Governments to address the challenges and opportunities of urban growth and internal migration by taking prompt, forward-looking and sustained action to ensure that those phenomena have a positive impact on economic growth, poverty eradication and environmental sustainability and, in doing so, to enable the participation and representation of all relevant stakeholders in planning for an urban future, and calls upon the international community to support the efforts of developing countries in this regard, including through building capacities to respond to these challenges and opportunities;

5. Urges Governments to promote development that would encourage linkages between urban and rural areas in recognition of their economic, social and environmental interdependence;

6. Emphasizes the need to eradicate poverty in rural areas, including through strategies that, integrating a gender perspective, are aimed at promoting interactions between cities and rural localities, particularly by generating employment for rural residents, creating opportunities to market agricultural products in urban areas and facilitating access to credit, education, vocational training and health services for rural residents and rural-urban migrants;

7. Also emphasizes, in the context of population distribution, urbanization, internal migration and development, and bearing in mind national priorities, the importance of establishing and funding active labour market policies devoted to the promotion of full and productive employment and decent work for all, including the full participation of women in all international and national development and poverty eradication strategies, the creation of more and better jobs for women, both urban and rural, and their inclusion in social protection and social dialogue;

8. Urges Governments to improve the plight of the urban poor, many of whom work in the informal sector of the economy, and to promote the integration of internal migrants from rural areas into urban areas by developing and improving their income-earning capability, with special attention to women, in particular female workers and female heads of households;

9. Calls upon Governments to take into account the impacts of population distribution, urbanization, internal migration and development in the formulation of family-sensitive policies in the field of housing, work, health, social security and education;

10. Also calls upon Governments to increase the capacity and competence of city and municipal authorities to manage urban development to safeguard the environment, to respond to the need of all citizens, including young people and urban squatters, for personal safety, basic infrastructure and services, to eliminate health and social problems, including problems of drugs and criminality, and problems resulting from overcrowding and disasters, and to provide people with alternatives to living in areas prone to natural and man-made disasters;

11. Urges Governments to promote healthy living in both rural and urban areas in all spheres of health, including sexual and reproductive health, in particular the improvement of maternal, child and adolescent health, and efforts to reduce maternal and child mortality, in the light of the challenges and opportunities presented by population distribution, urbanization, internal migration and development;

12. Calls upon Governments to develop and implement policies aimed at ensuring that all persons, irrespective of where they live, have adequate economic and social protection during old age;

13. Recognizes that the effective implementation of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development requires an increased commitment of financial resources, both domestically and externally, and in this context calls upon developed countries to complement the national financial efforts of developing countries related to population and development and to intensify their efforts to transfer new and additional resources to the developing countries, in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Programme of Action, in order to ensure that population and development objectives and goals are met;

14. Notes that recent increases in the flow of financial resources for assisting in the implementation of the Programme of Action have been primarily a result of the increased funding for HIV/AIDS activities, and expresses concern that funding for family planning is far below the suggested targets;

15. Encourages Governments, in formulating and implementing policies, strategies and programmes on HIV/AIDS prevention, treatment, care and support and on other communicable diseases, to focus on the diverse and special needs of urban and rural populations and of migrant populations, including temporary migrants, and emphasizes the need to address the overall expansion and feminization of the HIV/AIDS pandemic;

16. Also encourages Governments to promote the principles and practice of sustainable urbanization in order to address environmental issues, including climate change, thereby reducing the vulnerability of the low-income sectors of society to the risks posed by environmental impacts in a rapidly urbanizing world, and invites the international donor community to support the efforts of developing countries in this regard;

17. Urges Governments to set up or, where they already exist, to strengthen relevant institutions and mechanisms for spatially disaggregated data collection, demographic estimates and projections by age, sex and household composition linked to environmental, economic and social issues at the national and local levels in order to inform policy formulation, regional, urban and rural planning, the planning of service provision, investment decisions or advocacy in favour of vulnerable and marginalized groups, bearing in mind the gender perspective;

18. Stresses the need for technical and financial support for the activities associated with the preparation and conduct of the 2010 round of population censuses, which will provide important data on urban and rural development;

19. Acknowledges that the United Nations regional commissions play an important role in adapting the international population and development agenda to the regional contexts, and encourages the Secretary-General to continue relying on the regional commissions for the implementation of the regional population and development agendas;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to continue, in the framework of the implementation of the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development, his substantive work on population distribution, urbanization and internal migration, including integrating a gender perspective into its analyses and recommendations, in collaboration and coordination with relevant United Nations agencies, funds and programmes and other relevant international organizations, and to continue assessing the progress made in achieving the goals and objectives on population distribution, urbanization, internal migration and development set out in the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits, giving due consideration to their implications for development.
