This background paper by Hiroshi Kawamura (CDP Secretariat) examines the prospects of achieving one of the main goals of the Istanbul Programme of Action, namely, having at least half of the LDCs to meet the graduation criteria by 2020. It explains why this goal is unlikely to be met even under an optimistic scenario.
- Trade Benefits for Least Developed Countries: the Bangladesh Case
Mustafizur Rahman, of the Centre for Policy Dialogue, argues that LDC-specific trade preferences have played a crucial role in Bangladesh's development. However, Bangladesh will need to build the needed supply-side capacities and undertake necessary reforms to further benefit from preferential market access on a more sustainable basis.
