4. The situation in Burundi

Overview

During the period under review, the Security Council held six meetings and adopted two resolutions in connection with the situation in Burundi. The Council focused on the electoral process and post-conflict situation in Burundi. The United Nations Integrated Office in Burundi (BINUB) was scaled down and replaced by the United Nations Office in Burundi (BNUB) effective from 1 January 2011, with a mandate, inter alia, to support the Government of Burundi in strengthening the independence, capacities and legal frameworks of key national institutions. The Council extended the mandate of BNUB for a period of one year.

10 May 2010: electoral process

On 10 May 2010, the Executive Representative of the Secretary-General for Burundi and Head of BINUB briefed members on the preparations for the presidential and legislative elections scheduled for 28 June and 23 July 2010 respectively. While highlighting the positive developments in the preparation for the elections, including the issuance of free identity cards, the submission of names of the candidates by the political parties for communal elections, the signing of the code of conduct for political parties, the media and the administration, and the significant progress in securing the budget for the elections, he noted the challenges ahead, particularly those relating to the tightness of the electoral calendar and the management of tensions that might arise on the day of elections. Concurring with the positive assessment of the overall situation in Burundi, the Chair of the Burundi configuration of the Peacebuilding Commission pointed out that successful elections in Burundi would be key to solidifying the political foundation for peace and economic development in the country. The representative of Burundi informed the Council that the National Independent Electoral Commission had been established and plans for election security had been developed. He expressed optimism about the successful holding of the elections, given the presence of a great number of regional and international observers, a higher standard of press freedom, and the existence of the legal and operational frameworks for free and transparent elections.

9 December 2010 to 7 December 2011: reports of the Secretary-General on BINUB and BNUB

From 9 December 2010 to 7 December 2011, the Executive Representative of the Secretary-General and Head of BINUB or the Special Representative of the Secretary-General and Head of BNUB and the Chair of the Burundi configuration of the Peacebuilding Commission provided three joint briefings to the Council on the progress and challenges faced by Burundi in peacebuilding, particularly in the areas of human rights and transitional justice.

On 9 December 2010, the Executive Representative of the Secretary-General and Head of BINUB presented the seventh report of the Secretary-General, which provided an update on major developments in Burundi and outlined his proposals on the mandate and structure of the post-BINUB presence.\(^56\) Despite the concerns expressed in the report over the threats and intimidation of members of the political opposition and the prevalent climate of impunity, he stressed the progress achieved, such as the absence of large-scale violence during and after the electoral period, enhanced representation of women in the National Assembly, and the integration of ex-combatants. On the basis of the report, the Executive Representative recommended a continuing but downsized United Nations presence in Burundi to succeed BINUB after the expiration of the mandate on 31 December 2010.\(^57\) Expressing his concern about “an appreciable increase in human rights violations”, the Chair of the Burundi configuration of the Peacebuilding Commission identified four areas in the future work of the configuration: supporting the country in its integration into the East African Community; incorporating conflict-sensitive aspects in the poverty reduction strategy; addressing the rule of law and respect for human rights aspects; and promoting the culture of dialogue among the various parties in the country.\(^58\) In response to the concerns expressed in the Secretary-General’s report, the representative of Burundi outlined the initiatives taken by his Government to address those issues.\(^59\)

On 17 May 2011, the Special Representative of the Secretary-General stated that, although progress had been made in peacebuilding efforts, challenges remained. Citing the areas of transitional justice and human rights efforts, she referred to the normalization of relations between the Government and extra-parliamentary parties, the process of establishing a truth and reconciliation commission, and the establishment of the National Independent Human Rights Commission. At the same time, she warned that the consolidation of peace remained marred by politically motivated killing and extreme poverty. Lastly, she reported that BNUB had been working on the principal benchmarks in order to facilitate the eventual transition to a United Nations country team.

Part I. Consideration of questions under the responsibility of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security

63 Commending the establishment of both the National Independent Human Rights Commission and an Office of the Ombudsman, the Chair of the Burundi configuration of the Peacebuilding Commission urged the Government to speed up its efforts in connection with political dialogue, respect for human rights and good governance. 64

16 December 2010 and 20 December 2011: establishment of BNUB and extension of the mandate

On 16 December 2010, by resolution 1959 (2010), the Council, inter alia, took note with appreciation of the successful holding of five consecutive elections between May and September 2010, and requested the Secretary-General to establish the United Nations Office in Burundi with a mandate to support the Government of Burundi in, inter alia, strengthening the independence, capacities and legal frameworks of key national institutions, promoting and facilitating dialogue between national actors, supporting efforts to fight impunity and promoting and protecting human rights. The Council, further, called upon the Secretary-General to develop a set of benchmarks for the future evolution of BNUB into a United Nations country team presence.

On 20 December 2011, by resolution 2027 (2011), the Council, inter alia, extended until 15 February 2013 the mandate of BNUB and included in its mandate supporting the efforts of the Government with regard to socioeconomic development and deepening regional integration.

5. The situation in Sierra Leone

Overview

During the period under review, the Security Council held six meetings and adopted three resolutions in connection with the situation in Sierra Leone. It received four briefings by the Secretariat and the Chair of the Sierra Leone configuration of the Peacebuilding Commission focusing on the political and security situations as well as peacebuilding support activities in the country. The Council lifted the remaining sanctions that it had imposed on Sierra Leone in response to the civil war in the 1990s and twice extended the mandate of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Sierra Leone (UNIPSIL) for a period of one year each time.
