

should allow a transition of power to a duly-elected successor before the scheduled termination of the United Nations Mission in Haiti on 29 February 1996. The holding of presidential elections on schedule is a crucial step in consolidating long-lasting democracy in Haiti and ensuring a smooth transition of government. The Council calls upon all political parties in Haiti to participate in the forthcoming elections and to contribute actively to maintain the secure and stable conditions necessary for their conduct.

The Council notes with concern recent instances of violence in Haiti and calls for respect for the rule of law, national reconciliation and cooperation.

The Government and people of Haiti bear the primary responsibility for Haiti's political, economic and social reconstruction. The Council underlines its firm support for the progress Haiti has already made in this regard. The Council emphasizes that a sustained commitment by the international community is indispensable for long-term peace and stability in Haiti. In this regard the Council encourages the Haitian Government to continue its dialogue with the international financial institutions.

The Council shares the view of the Secretary-General that the establishment of a professional police force capable of maintaining law and order throughout the country is central to Haiti's long-term stability. As the end of the mandate of the United Nations Mission in Haiti approaches, attention should be focused on the selection and training of the Haitian national police supervisors and on interested Member States providing the police force with the necessary equipment.

The Council also supports the efforts of the Secretary-General to streamline the United Nations Mission in Haiti, including the civilian police component.

The Council expresses its confidence that the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, the joint United Nations Mission in Haiti and the United Nations/Organization of American States International Civilian Mission in Haiti will continue to assist the Government and people of Haiti. It notes in particular the useful role played by the Organization of American States and the valuable cooperation with Haiti of interested Member States on a bilateral basis and stresses the importance of continuing such cooperation. The Council requests that the Secretary-General, in consultation with the Friends of the Secretary-General on the question of Haiti and the Haitian authorities, report to the Council, at the appropriate time, on the next steps in the areas of security, law enforcement and humanitarian assistance, including by United Nations specialized agencies and programmes, which the international community may take to help Haiti achieve a long-term future that is secure, stable and free.

14. The situation in Cambodia

Decision of 8 March 1993 (3181st meeting): resolution 810 (1993)

On 13 February 1993, pursuant to resolution 792 (1992) of 30 November 1992, the Secretary-General submitted to the Security Council a report on the implementation of that resolution and on measures necessary to ensure the realization of the fundamental objectives of the Paris Agreements on Cambodia.<sup>1</sup> The Secretary-General reported that, on 28 January 1993, the Supreme National Council had met in Beijing under the chairmanship of Prince Sihanouk and had agreed that elections for the constituent assembly would be held from 23 to 25 May 1993. In addition, the Supreme National Council had discussed the possibility of issuing a declaration denouncing all acts of violence, urging self-restraint on the Cambodian parties and calling for an end to violence directed against the United Nations Transitional Authority in Cambodia (UNTAC). Despite the objection of the Party of Democratic Kampuchea (PDK) to such a declaration, Prince Sihanouk had issued a statement in his own name and on behalf of three of the four parties.<sup>2</sup> He had also announced that he would not advance his candidacy for the presidential elections until a new constitution, which would lay down the modalities for the election of the head of State and the related term of office and powers, was adopted. The Supreme National Council had met again, on 10 February 1993, and had adopted a moratorium on the export of minerals and gems from Cambodia in accordance with resolution 792 (1992). It had further decided to consider adopting limits on the export of sawn timber in order to protect Cambodia's natural resources.

<sup>1</sup> S/25289. The report should be read in conjunction with the third progress report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Transitional Authority in Cambodia (S/25124).

<sup>2</sup> See S/25289, annex I, for the statement by Prince Sihanouk, also on behalf of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front, the Front uni national pour un Cambodge indépendant, neutre, pacifique et coopératif and the Party of the State of Cambodia.

The Secretary-General noted that, despite the fact that progress had been made in implementing resolution 792 (1992), the response of some Cambodian parties had not been satisfactory. The Party of the State of Cambodia had offered substantial cooperation to UNTAC but recently there had been serious difficulties relating to the maintenance of law and order in the areas under its control. The Cambodian People's Armed Forces had also launched military attacks against the National Army of Democratic Kampuchea which went beyond its right of self-defence. As for PDK, by failing to admit UNTAC to its zones and to register for the elections, it had again refused to avail itself of the many opportunities offered to it by UNTAC and the international community to rejoin the peace process. At the same time, it was important to resist any pressure to exclude PDK representatives from the Supreme National Council. The Secretary-General was convinced that the framework of the Paris Agreements still offered the best hope for a solution to the problems of Cambodia and for the promotion of national reconciliation. He also stressed that the primary responsibility for the implementation of the Paris Agreements rested with the Cambodian signatories and that the future stability and well-being of the country depended on the Cambodians themselves. Referring to the Declaration of 28 January 1993 issued by Prince Sihanouk, he suggested that the Council might issue a similar call, broadening the demand contained in paragraph 17 of its resolution 792 (1992) and further appeal to the three parties, which had aligned themselves with the Declaration, to continue their close cooperation with UNTAC and to prevent or punish acts of violence, particularly those politically motivated.

The Secretary-General concluded by saying that it was imperative for UNTAC to maintain the momentum towards the holding of the constituent assembly elections as scheduled. Meanwhile, he had instructed his Special Representative to assess post-election security requirements and would, in due course, present appropriate recommendations to the Council.

At its 3181st meeting, on 8 March 1993, the Security Council included the report of the Secretary-General in its agenda. After the adoption of the agenda, the President (New Zealand) drew the attention of the members of the Council to the text of a draft resolution prepared in the course of the Council's prior consultations.<sup>3</sup> He also drew their attention to other documents.<sup>4</sup>

Speaking before the vote, the representative of France stated that the draft resolution focused primarily on the elections in Cambodia, which constituted the cornerstone of the peace process and one of the central purposes of the Paris Agreements, which created the most ambitious United Nations operation in history. It was therefore essential, at that stage of the process, for the Security Council to take a unanimous decision. In his view, the draft resolution would send a clear political signal to all the Cambodian parties that violence would not be tolerated and that they had no other choice but to respect the rules of democracy. The Security Council would endorse the outcome of the elections, provided they were certified free and fair by the United Nations. It would also continue to lend its support to the elected constituent assembly and to the process of drafting a constitution and establishing a new Government for Cambodia. Contending that the Cambodians themselves bore the responsibility to restore peace and stability in their own country, he appealed to the people and the leaders of the Cambodian parties to exercise tolerance, moderation and political maturity so that the elections could take place in a neutral political climate.<sup>5</sup>

The representative of China recalled that the Paris Agreements constituted the foundation for a comprehensive settlement of the Cambodian question. Difficulties and differences arising from their implementation should be resolved by the joint efforts of the parties concerned, through consultation and dialogue. It was regrettable, however, as pointed out by the Secretary-General in his report, that politically motivated violence had been occurring continuously and that a neutral political environment, a key factor in Speaking after the vote, the representative of the United States stated that the resolution just adopted marked another milestone towards achieving the major goal of the Paris Agreements. She noted, however, that the holding of elections would be only one step towards the ultimate goal of creating a peaceful, democratic Cambodia. For elections to be successful and national reconciliation to occur, all the Cambodian parties must be prepared to respect the results. In voting for the resolution, the United States was committing itself to support the elected Government as the sole legitimate authority for Cambodia.<sup>7</sup>

Decision of 5 April 1993 (3193rd meeting):
statement by the President

At the Council's 3193rd meeting, on 5 April 1993, the President (Pakistan) said that, after consultations among the members of the Council, he had been authorized to make the following statement on behalf of the Council:<sup>8</sup>

The Security Council strongly condemns all attacks on the United Nations Transitional Authority in Cambodia (UNTAC), particularly the recent attacks which have resulted in the death of two Bangladeshi members of UNTAC and the cowardly assassination of three members of the Bulgarian contingent of UNTAC on 2 April 1993.

The Council expresses its strong support for UNTAC in carrying out its mandate within the framework of the Paris agreements. It demands that all hostile acts against UNTAC cease immediately and that all parties take measures to safeguard the lives and the security of UNTAC personnel.

It expresses its condolences to the Governments of Bangladesh and Bulgaria and to the families of the victims; it pays tribute to the latter for their courage and dedication. It requests the Secretary-General to report urgently to the Council on the circumstances of these murderous acts and the responsibility for them.

The Council also expresses its determination that the election for the constituent assembly should be held on the dates decided by the Supreme National Council and endorsed by the Security Council in its resolution 810 (1993) of 8 March 1993. In this respect, the Council stresses the importance of ensuring a neutral political environment in Cambodia, as well as the cessation of acts of violence and of all threats and intimidation committed on political or ethnic grounds.

Decision of 20 May 1993 (3213th meeting):
resolution 826 (1993)

On 3 May 1993, pursuant to resolution 745 (1992), the Secretary-General submitted to the Security Council a fourth progress report on UNTAC.<sup>9</sup> He reported that it had not proven possible to implement fully all aspects of the Paris Agreements in accordance with the implementation plan he had submitted to the Council in February 1992.<sup>10</sup> The non-cooperation of PDK had persisted and all efforts by the Security Council, by UNTAC and by others, to persuade PDK to assume its responsibilities under the Agreements, had been to no avail. In addition, PDK's refusal to open its zones to UNTAC and to canton and disarm its troops had led to the suspension of the demobilization of the armed forces of the other three factions. The Party of the State of Cambodia and the Cambodian People's Armed Forces had also taken part in politically motivated attacks against opposition parties in order to intimidate them. Moreover, the massacres of Vietnamese-speaking persons and deliberate attacks on UNTAC members reflected the growing hostility of PDK to the peace process and to the elections. Although ceasefire violations were generally on a small scale and UNTAC had achieved some successes in reducing political violence, it appeared that the elections would not be taking place in an environment as disarmed and politically neutral as had been envisaged in the Paris Agreements and in the implementation plan. At the same time, however, Cambodians were strongly committed to the electoral process. About 96 per cent of the eligible population had registered to vote and 20 political parties had completed the formalities for registration to compete in the elections. The three Cambodian parties cooperating with UNTAC had also pledged to accept the election results and preparations for the conduct of the elections were well under way. Despite imperfect conditions and taking into account all circumstances, the Secretary-General saw no reason to hold back an election which was not the end, but rather the beginning of the process of Cambodia's renewal.

On 15 May 1993, pursuant to resolution 810 (1993), the Secretary-General submitted to the Council a report in which he described the conditions and the preparations for the holding of elections in Cambodia.<sup>11</sup> The Secretary-General informed the Council that technical preparations had been virtually completed. At the meeting of the Supreme National Council held on 21 April 1993, his Special Representative had expressed the view that the freeness and fairness of the elections would be judged in accordance with three main criteria: the extent to which the campaign and voting were marred by violence; intimidation and harassment; the extent to which the Party of the State of Cambodia, which controlled the largest zones and had the most extensive administrative structure, enjoyed unfair advantages; and the technical conduct of the poll. The Secretary-General also reported on the security plans which UNTAC had further refined and elaborated in the light of PDK's repeatedly expressed intention to oppose the elections, including by violent means. Under those plans, no polling would be conducted in PDK-controlled areas or areas to which UNTAC had been denied access. Other parts of the country had been designated as high, medium, and low-risk zones, with different levels of security measures. In high-risk zones, armed UNTAC military personnel would be stationed at and around polling stations. Quick reaction forces and medical support units had also been identified for those areas. He was also giving "urgent and close consideration" to a request by the three Cambodian factions supporting the elections for the return of weapons they had placed under UNTAC control, based on the fact that they held primary responsibility for the maintenance of security in the zones under their control.

The Secretary-General noted that, despite the meticulous preparations by UNTAC, the conditions for the elections had fallen short of those envisioned by the Paris Agreements, owing to PDK's progressive withdrawal from the peace process, starting with not complying with the military provisions of the Agreements and moving to boycotting the elections and then disrupting them through violence. Regrettably, the Party of the State of Cambodia had also contributed, although to a lesser extent, towards the climate of violence by resorting to intimidation of other political parties. Moreover, it had not responded satisfactorily to UNTAC's efforts to prevent the use of its administrative structure for political purposes. Nevertheless, the Secretary-General had directed that the elections be held as scheduled, according to the will and intent of the Security Council and of the vast majority of the Cambodian people.

At its 3213th meeting, on 20 May 1993, the Security Council included the two reports of the Secretary-General in its agenda. Following the adoption of the agenda, the President (Russian Federation) drew the attention of the members of the Council to the text of a draft resolution prepared in the course of the Council's prior consultations, and read out a revision made to the draft resolution in its provisional form.<sup>12</sup> He also drew their attention to several other documents.<sup>13</sup>

The draft resolution, as orally revised, was thereupon put to the vote and adopted unanimously as resolution 826 (1993), which reads:

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its resolutions 668 (1990) of 20 September 1990, 745 (1992) of 28 February 1992, 810 (1993) of 8 March 1993 and other relevant resolutions,

Taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General of 3 May 1993 and 15 May 1993,

4. Commends those participating in the election campaign in accordance with the Paris agreements despite the violence and intimidation in order that the Cambodian people may have an opportunity to choose freely their own government;

5. Deplores all acts of non-cooperation with the Paris agreements and condemns all acts of violence committed on political and ethnic grounds, intimidation and attacks on Authority personnel;

6. Expresses its full support for the measures taken by the Authority to protect the safety of its personnel and underlines the need for the Authority to continue its efforts in this regard;

7. Demands that all parties take all actions necessary to safeguard the lives and the security of Authority personnel throughout Cambodia, and desist from all threats or intimidation against Authority personnel and from any interference with them in the performance of their mandate;

8. Expresses its appreciation for the positive efforts and the achievements of the Authority in preparation for the elections, in respect both of the registration of candidates and parties and of the holding of the electoral campaign, albeit under difficult conditions;

9. Fully supports the decision of the Secretary-General that the election be held as scheduled in accordance with the decision of the Supreme National Council endorsed by the Security Council in its resolution 810 (1993);

10. Calls on the Authority to continue to work in accordance with resolution 810 (1993) to ensure a neutral political environment conducive to the holding of free and fair elections;

11. Reaffirms its determination to endorse the results of the election for the constituent assembly provided that the United Nations certifies it free and fair;

12. Reminds all the Cambodian parties of their obligation under the Paris agreements fully to comply with the results of the election;

13. Warns that the Council will respond appropriately should any of the parties fail to honour its obligations;

14. Reaffirms its readiness to support fully the constituent assembly and the process of drawing up a constitution and establishing a new government for all Cambodia and to support subsequent efforts to promote national reconciliation and peacebuilding;

15. Recognizes that the Cambodians themselves bear primary responsibility for the implementation of the Paris agreements and for the political future and well-being of their own country, and reaffirms that all Cambodian parties are expected to honour their obligations under the Paris agreements and participate constructively and peacefully in the political process after the election;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to report promptly to the Council on the holding and results of the election, including on the conduct of the parties as regards their obligations under the Paris agreements and, if necessary, to recommend any initiative and/or measures conducive to ensuring their full respect by all parties;

17. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Speaking after the vote, the representatives of the United States, France, the United Kingdom and the Russian Federation stated that it was important for the Council to reaffirm its commitment to bring peace and democracy to Cambodia by endorsing the results of the elections, provided that they were certified free and fair by the United Nations. They also warned that, should any party try to interfere or overturn the outcome of the elections in Cambodia, the Security Council stood ready to take appropriate measures against those who endeavoured to do so.<sup>14</sup>

The representative of China noted that the entire international community was concerned with the issue of how to maintain peace in Cambodia after its constituent assembly elections. His country neither wished to see the flames of war rekindled in Cambodia nor supported any party in resorting to force. It stood for the realization of genuine reconciliation, embodying all the Cambodian parties, so that Cambodia would embark on the road of building up an independent, sovereign, unified, peaceful and neutral State.<sup>15</sup>

Decision of 22 May 1993 (3214th meeting):
statement by the President

At the Council's 3214th meeting, on 22 May 1993, the President (Russian Federation) said that, after consultations among the members of the Council, he had been authorized to make the following statement on behalf of the Council:<sup>16</sup>

The Security Council strongly condemns the shelling on 21 May 1993 of the United Nations Transitional Authority in Cambodia (UNTAC), during which the Chinese engineering detachment suffered two deaths and seven wounded. It expresses its condolences to the Chinese Government and to the families of the victims; it pays tribute to the latter for their courage and dedication.

The Council takes note of the preliminary report by the Secretariat indicating that the shelling was carried out by the National Army of Democratic Kampuchea. It requests the Secretary-General to investigate further and to report urgently to the Council.

The Council expresses its strong support for UNTAC in carrying out its mandate within the framework of the Paris agreements. It strongly condemns all attacks against UNTAC and demands that those responsible cease forthwith all hostile acts against UNTAC and take immediate measures to safeguard the lives and the security of UNTAC personnel.

The Council recalls the warning contained in its resolution 826 (1993) of 20 May 1993 that it would respond appropriately should any of the parties fail to honour its obligations. It further warns that it will not countenance the use of violence to interfere with or overturn the democratic process in Cambodia and will take further appropriate measures against any of the parties failing to honour its obligations.

The Council also expresses its determination that the election for the constituent assembly should be held on the dates decided by the Supreme National Council and endorsed by the Security Council in its resolution 810 (1993) of 8 March 1993 and reaffirms its commitment to resolution 826 (1993). The Council calls upon the Cambodian people fully to exercise their right to vote in the forthcoming elections. In this respect, the Council stresses the importance of ensuring the cessation of acts of violence and of all threats and intimidation, as well as of ensuring a neutral political environment in Cambodia.

Decision of 2 June 1993 (3227th meeting):
resolution 835 (1993)

At its 3227th meeting, on 2 June 1993, the Security Council resumed consideration of the item entitled "The situation in Cambodia". After the adoption of the agenda, the President (Spain) drew the attention of the members of the Council to the text of a draft resolution prepared in the course of prior consultations.<sup>17</sup> He also drew their attention to a letter dated 2 June 1993 from the Secretary-General, addressed to the President of the Security Council, transmitting the text of a statement made by his Special Representative for Cambodia, at a meeting of the Supreme National Council, on 29 May 1993, after the conclusion of the elections.<sup>18</sup> In that statement, the Special Representative had declared that the conduct of the elections had been free and fair.

The draft resolution was thereupon put to the vote and was adopted unanimously as resolution 835 (1993), which reads:

The Security Council,

authorized to make the following statement on behalf of the Council:<sup>20</sup>

The Security Council strongly condemns the armed attack against a Pakistani platoon and another against a Malaysian platoon of the United Nations Transitional Authority in Cambodia (UNTAC), both on 7 June 1993. In the first incident, two Pakistani personnel were injured, one of them seriously; in the second, three Malaysian personnel were injured, one of them seriously.

The Council takes note of the Secretariat's preliminary report that the first attack was launched against the Pakistani compound by the National Army of Democratic Kampuchea; the identity of the attackers in the second incident has not yet been determined. It requests the Secretary-General to investigate further and to report urgently to the Council.

The Council demands that those responsible for the attacks cease immediately all attacks against UNTAC and reiterates its warning that it will take appropriate measures against those who are threatening the safety and security of UNTAC personnel and are trying to overturn the democratic process in Cambodia through violence.

Decision of 15 June 1993 (3237th meeting):
resolution 840 (1993)

On 10 June 1993, pursuant to resolutions 826 (1993) and 835 (1993), the Secretary-General submitted to the Security Council a report on the conduct and results of the elections in Cambodia.<sup>21</sup> The Secretary-General reported that they had been held as scheduled, from 23 to 28 May 1993, in all 21 provinces in Cambodia, and that the polling had been generally peaceful, despite a few scattered incidents of violence. Voter turnout had been impressive with 89.56 per cent of registered voters taking part. At a meeting of the Supreme National Council, convened on 29 May 1993 to review the polling process, his Special Representative had declared that, in view of the very high turnout throughout the country, the absence of violence during the polling, the success of the technical conduct of the poll and the calm and peaceful atmosphere throughout the polling period, the conduct of the poll had been free and fair. The counting of the ballots, which had begun on 29 May 1993 had been completed.<sup>22</sup> Accordingly, the Secretary-General had authorized his Special Representative to issue a statement declaring that the elections as a whole had been free and fair.<sup>23</sup> Urging all parties to respect and accept the results and to resolve any disputes they might have through the agreed channels, the Secretary-General stated that UNTAC would give the constituent assembly full support in the process of drawing up a constitution and establishing a new Government for all Cambodia. He was also confident that the international community would continue to support efforts to promote national reconciliation and peacebuilding.

At its 3237th meeting, on 15 June 1993, the Security Council included the report of the Secretary-General in its agenda. After the adoption of the agenda, the President (Spain) drew the attention of the members of the Council to the text of a draft resolution submitted by China, France, Japan, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom and the United States.<sup>24</sup> He then read out some revisions made to the draft in its provisional form. The President also drew their attention to a letter dated 11 June 1993 from the representative of Denmark, addressed to the Secretary-General, transmitting the text of a statement issued by the European Community and its Member States on the Cambodian elections.<sup>25</sup>

The draft resolution, as orally revised, was thereupon put to the vote and was adopted unanimously as resolution 840 (1993), which reads:

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its resolutions 668 (1990) of 20 September 1990, 745 (1992) of 28 February 1992, 810 (1993) of 8 March 1993, 826 (1993) of 20 May 1993, 835 (1993) of 2 June 1993 and other relevant resolutions,

1. Approves the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the results of the election, which has been certified free and fair by the United Nations;
3. Calls upon all parties to stand by their obligation to respect fully the results of the election and to cooperate in securing a peaceful transition and welcomes, in this context, the efforts of His Royal Highness Prince Norodom Sihanouk to achieve national reconciliation and his leadership and continuing role in maintaining stability and in promoting cooperation among Cambodians by appropriate means;
4. Fully supports the newly elected constituent assembly which has begun its work of drawing up and approving a constitution according to the principles laid down in annex 5 to the Agreement on a Comprehensive Political Settlement of the Cambodia Conflict contained in the agreements signed in Paris on 23 October 1991, and will subsequently transform itself into a legislative assembly, which will establish a new government for all Cambodia;
5. Emphasizes the necessity to complete this work and to establish a new government for all Cambodia as soon as possible and within the time allotted by the Paris agreements;
6. Requests the United Nations Transitional Authority in Cambodia to continue to play its role in conjunction with the Supreme National Council during the transitional period in accordance with the Paris agreements;
7. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the Security Council by the middle of July, including his recommendations on the possible role the United Nations and its agencies might play after the end of the mandate of the Authority according to the Paris agreements;
8. Urges all States and relevant international organizations to contribute actively to the reconstruction and rehabilitation of Cambodia;
9. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Speaking after the vote, the representative of France said that, in voting for the resolution, his country had intended to emphasize its support for the statement of the Special Representative for Cambodia as to the free and fair nature of the elections. The last stage of the peace process remained to be carried out with the leading role of the United Nations. He stressed the need for a coalition plan to expedite pending matters while the Constituent Assembly drafted the constitution.<sup>26</sup>

The representative of the Russian Federation saw the elections in Cambodia as an important factor for peace and stability not only in that country, but in the whole South-East Asia. He contended that the necessary concrete preconditions for achieving the main goal of the Paris Agreements were in place: the restoration of peace on the basis of national reconciliation and the formation of a new Cambodia — a sovereign, independent, neutral and territorial integral State that respected human rights and maintained good-neighbourly relations with all countries of the world.<sup>27</sup>

Decision of 16 July 1993: letter from the President to the Secretary-General

By a letter dated 14 July 1993 addressed to the President of the Security Council, the Secretary-General stated that the success of the elections in Cambodia marked the beginning of a particularly delicate phase in the country's transition from conflict to peace and democracy.<sup>28</sup> After careful consideration, he had concluded, on the recommendation of his Special Representative for Cambodia and in consultation with a number of concerned Governments, that urgent measures must be taken to enable UNTAC to provide, for the remainder of the transitional period, and in consultation with the Cambodian authorities, emergency financial assistance for the restructuring and adjustment of the administrative, police and military structures of the Interim Joint Administration. His Special Representative had advised that the amount of funding required to achieve the objectives for the remainder of the transitional period would be $20 million. It was the Secretary-General's view that such a step was fully consistent with the uniquely broad mandate which UNTAC had been given by the Council to help implement the Paris Agreements.

By a letter dated 16 July 1993,<sup>29</sup> the President of the Security Council informed the Secretary-General that the members of the Council had considered his letter of 14 July concerning Cambodia and they agreed with the views contained therein.

Decision of 26 July 1993: letter from the President to the Secretary-General

On 16 July 1993, pursuant to resolution 840 (1993), the Secretary-General submitted to the Council a report in which he outlined the plan for the withdrawal of UNTAC, to be completed by 15 November 1993, and described the possible role of the United Nations after the end of the UNTAC mandate.<sup>30</sup>

The Secretary-General noted that Cambodia still faced enormous problems of security, stability, mine clearance, infrastructure improvement and general economic and social development. Moreover, despite the positive developments of the last few weeks, the political-military situation remained fragile and the task before the new Government could be expected to be difficult and challenging. Clearly, Cambodia would require continued international assistance and support. He indicated, in that regard, that various programmes and agencies of the United Nations system, as well as international financial institutions, would be prepared, in consultation with the Government of Cambodia, to continue to play their traditional role in rehabilitation, reconstruction, development and humanitarian assistance. In addition, a continued human rights presence had been mandated both under the Paris Agreements and by a decision of the Commission on Human Rights. The United Nations could also undertake mine clearance, which would continue to be a major need for years to come.

The Secretary-General also addressed the question of maintaining a United Nations military presence. He said that should the Government of Cambodia request the stationing of a small number of United Nations military observers in the country for a limited period as a confidence-building measure and to monitor and report on the security of its borders, the Council would without any doubt consider such a request at the appropriate time.

By a letter dated 26 July 1993,<sup>31</sup> the President of the Security Council informed the Secretary-General that the members of the Council had considered his report and they endorsed the overall concept and arrangements contained in paragraphs 9 to 33 of the report concerning the withdrawal of UNTAC. They would continue their consideration of the remainder of the report.

Decision of 27 August 1993 (3270th meeting):
resolution 860 (1993)

On 26 August 1993, pursuant to resolution 840 (1993), the Secretary-General submitted a further report to the Council in which he described new developments in Cambodia as well as UNTAC's withdrawal and preparations for the post-UNTAC period.<sup>32</sup>

The Secretary-General noted that post-election developments had been encouraging. The Constituent Assembly was about to adopt the new Constitution and establish the new Government. In view of the need to allow sufficient time for the approval of the Constitution and the emergence of the new Government, he recommended that the mandate of UNTAC be extended until 15 September 1993. Concerning the suggestion that the United Nations should maintain a small military presence in Cambodia following the withdrawal of UNTAC, he had decided not to recommend, at that stage, the retention of United Nations military personnel in Cambodia after the departure of UNTAC, but to concentrate the resources available on civilian activities in support of peacebuilding. Should the new Government request a post-UNTAC military presence, with a clear indication of its mandate, he would, however, be ready to submit a report to the Security Council on the feasibility of the tasks proposed and the resources that would be required to carry them out.

The Secretary-General reiterated his intention to establish an integrated office in Phnom Penh to be headed by a United Nations representative who would coordinate, in close consultation with the Government of Cambodia, the full range of civilian activities to be undertaken by various agencies of the United Nations system. In addition, the Office would deal with a number of residual issues arising from the Paris Agreements and UNTAC's presence in the country.

At its 3270th meeting, on 27 August 1993, the Security Council included the report of the Secretary-General in its agenda. After the adoption of the agenda, the President (United States) drew the attention of the members of the Council to the text of a draft resolution prepared in the course of prior consultations.<sup>33</sup>

The draft resolution was thereupon put to vote and adopted unanimously as resolution 860 (1993), which reads:

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its resolutions 668 (1990) of 20 September 1990, 745 (1992) of 28 February 1992, 840 (1993) of 15 June 1993 and other relevant resolutions,

Taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General of 16 July 1993 and 26 August 1993,

Paying tribute to the continuing role of His Royal Highness Prince Norodom Sihanouk in achieving peace, stability and genuine national reconciliation for all Cambodia,

Recalling that, according to the agreements on a comprehensive political settlement to the Cambodian conflict signed in Paris on 23 October 1991, the transitional period shall terminate when the Constituent Assembly elected through free and fair elections, organized and certified by the United Nations, has approved the constitution and transformed itself into legislative assembly, and thereafter a new government has been created,

Noting the expressed wish of the Cambodian interim joint administration to maintain the mandate of the United Nations Transitional Authority in Cambodia until the establishment of a new government in Cambodia as conveyed by the Secretariat,

1. Welcomes the reports of the Secretary-General of 16 July 1993 and 26 August 1993 and approves the United Nations Transitional Authority in Cambodia withdrawal plan contained in the former;
2. Fully supports the Constituent Assembly in its work of drawing up and approving a constitution, and stresses the importance of completing this work in accordance with the agreements on a comprehensive political settlement to the Cambodian conflict signed in Paris on 23 October 1991;
3. Confirms that the functions of the Authority under the Paris agreements shall end upon the creation in September of a new government of Cambodia consistent with those agreements;
4. Decides that, in order to ensure a safe and an orderly withdrawal of the military component of the Authority, the period of such withdrawal shall end on 15 November 1993;
5. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Speaking after the vote, the representative of China said that, as a signatory to the Paris Agreements, his country had devoted its efforts to the comprehensive settlement of the issue before the

Council. The ultimate solution, however, rested with the Cambodian people themselves. No outside forces should interfere in the internal affairs of Cambodia. As for the post-UNTAC United Nations activities in that country, that decision should be based on the provisions of the Agreements and the requests of the new national Government.<sup>34</sup>

The representative of France said that the resolution just adopted, while purely technical in nature, clarified the conditions for completing the political role of the United Nations and of the maintenance, for practical reasons, of a residual military presence in Cambodia until 15 November 1993. Clearly, that country needed assistance. That would be the objective of the first meeting of the International Committee on the Reconstruction of Cambodia. The United Nations would also have a role to play, however that could only happen at the request of the new national Government. That would be the thrust of a future resolution, which at the same time would take stock of the United Nations accomplishments in Cambodia over the past 18 months.<sup>35</sup>

The representative of the United Kingdom said that the withdrawal of UNTAC did not mean that the United Nations and the international community could afford to turn its back on Cambodia, but the relationship would, in future, be of a different kind. First, it had to depend on the wishes of the new Government, and only thereafter on the Organization's decisions.<sup>36</sup>

The representative of New Zealand stated that, although a new Cambodian government was almost at hand, many aspects of the country's legacy of fighting and repression remained. Moreover, as noted by the Secretary-General in his last report, "massive reconstruction" was still required throughout the country. While the future of Cambodia lay in the hands of its people, the end of UNTAC did not mean the end of Cambodia's problems or of the United Nations involvement in that country. That issue must soon be addressed by the Council, in consultation with countries of the region. In that regard, New Zealand welcomed the initiative to convene a working group, which would include those countries, to begin work on a more comprehensive statement on the post-UNTAC United Nations presence.<sup>37</sup>

The President, speaking in her capacity as representative of the United States, said that although UNTAC was on the verge of completing its mission, the international community's responsibility to assist Cambodia was far from over, and the Council still had an important role to play. Concerned countries would also have the opportunity to address Cambodia's many urgent needs for rehabilitation and reconstruction at the upcoming Paris meeting of the International Committee on Reconstruction of Cambodia.<sup>38</sup>

Decision of 5 October 1993 (3287th meeting):
statement by the President

On 5 October 1993, pursuant to resolution 745 (1992), the Secretary-General submitted a further report to the Security Council in which he reported the formation, on 24 September, of the new Government of Cambodia, based on the will of the people expressed through free and fair elections organized and conducted by the United Nations.<sup>39</sup> On the same date, Prince Sihanouk had promulgated the Constitution according to which Cambodia had become a constitutional monarchy, with the official name "The Kingdom of Cambodia", and an independent, sovereign, peaceful, neutral and non-aligned State. The Constitution also stipulated that the Kingdom of Cambodia should recognize and respect human rights, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and all relevant international instruments. Accordingly, Prince Sihanouk was elected King. Subsequently, he appointed Prince Ranariddh as First Prime Minister and Hun Sen, as Second Prime Minister. The Secretary-General noted that the UNTAC mandate had been successfully concluded on 24 September 1993. Meanwhile, action was taken to establish a United Nations presence in the post-UNTAC period to carry out a variety of functions, including demining, economic rehabilitation and human rights, with a view to consolidating peace and stability in the country.

At its 3287th meeting, on 5 October 1993, the Security Council included the further report of the Secretary-General in its agenda. After the adoption of the agenda, the Council invited the representatives of Australia, Cambodia and Thailand, at their request, to participate in the discussion without the right to vote. The President (Brazil) then drew the attention of the members of the Council to a letter dated 30 September 1993 from the representatives of China, France, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom and the United States, addressed to the Secretary-General.<sup>40</sup>

The representative of Cambodia stated that, in his opinion, three essential elements had contributed to the success of the United Nations operation: the commitment of the international community, the will of the Cambodians to work together with the United Nations and the will of the Cambodian parties to seek reconciliation. He pointed out that his country would have to face two issues. First, the internal security issue resulting from the presence of armed bands, and the Khmer Rouge, the latter needing to dismantle its army and administration in order to form a single national royal army and administration. Secondly, the national rehabilitation and reconstruction issue. Recalling that, under the Paris Agreements, the international community had an obligation to assist Cambodia on those two issues, he called for a United Nations presence in Cambodia to reinforce the confidence of its people. Demining operations must continue and the presence of 20 or more military observers for a period of six months would be required. He also called for a permanent centre to deal with human rights. Furthermore, his Government would prefer to maintain the International Committee on the Reconstruction of Cambodia, rather than to establish another coordinating body.<sup>41</sup>

The representative of France said that the United Nations had the duty to live up to the expectations of the Cambodian people and to continue to play a role in the area of reconstruction and development, as well as the enhancement and protection of human rights. France supported the Government's request for the maintenance of a team of military observers, and welcomed the Secretary-General's intention to open an integrated United Nations office in Cambodia. The situation of the Khmer Rouge group remained however a problem. They must recognize Cambodia's legitimate authorities, accept the rules of democracy and renounce violence. The speaker recalled, in that regard, the third instrument in the Paris Agreements which concerned the sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and inviolability, neutrality and national unity for Cambodia.<sup>42</sup>

The representative of the United States said that the future of Cambodia's freedom and democracy was first and foremost the responsibility of its people. It was, however, also a matter of great importance to the United Nations and the international community, which had invested so much to help the Cambodian people. The challenge ahead was to assist the Government of Cambodia as appropriate to ensure the continuation of the great progress that had been achieved so as to allow Cambodia to enjoy the peace it so richly deserved.<sup>43</sup>

The representative of Thailand, speaking on behalf of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), expressed full support for the requests put forward by the Cambodian Government, which called for the establishment of a United Nations Integrated Office in Phnom Penh, the maintenance of representative offices of United Nations programmes and specialized agencies, the maintenance of the human rights component of UNTAC and its expansion into a permanent human rights centre, the continuation of the demining operations and lastly, the presence of a small number of military observers in Phnom Penh. ASEAN also looked forward to the appointment by the Secretary-General of a Special Representative to Cambodia. In conclusion, ASEAN shared the hope of the Government and people of Cambodia that the United Nations and the international community would continue to assist their country in its reconstruction and rehabilitation process. ASEAN stood ready to contribute in such efforts.<sup>44</sup>

A number of other speakers endorsed the United Nations continuing close involvement in Cambodia.<sup>45</sup> Some supported more specifically the requests of the Government of Cambodia.<sup>46</sup> Others were in favour of the adoption of a resolution which would address all aspects of the post-UNTAC presence, including the dispatch of military observers.<sup>47</sup>

At the same meeting, the President made the following statement on behalf of the Council:<sup>48</sup>

On behalf of the members of the Security Council, I wish to thank Prince Norodom Ranariddh, First Prime Minister, and Mr. Hun Sen, Second Prime Minister, of the Royal Government of Cambodia for their presence here and to express the satisfaction of the Security Council at the auspicious developments that have taken place in Cambodia since the holding of the elections of 23 to 28 May 1993, in particular the proclamation of the Cambodian Constitution on 24 September 1993 and the creation of the new government of Cambodia.

I also take this opportunity to congratulate His Majesty King Norodom Sihanouk, Head of State of Cambodia, on his accession to the throne and to pay tribute to the continuing role played by His Majesty in the quest for national reconciliation and a better future for all Cambodia.

In the light of the successful completion of the mandate of the United Nations Transitional Authority in Cambodia, the Council reiterates its recognition at the remarkable work carried out by the Authority, under the leadership of the Secretary-General and his Special Representative, Mr. Yasushi Akashi.

The Security Council stresses the importance of the continued support of the international community to the consolidation of peace and democracy and the promotion of development in Cambodia.

Taking into account the letter dated 26 September 1993 addressed to the Secretary-General by Prince Norodom Ranariddh, First Prime Minister, and Mr. Hun Sen, Second Prime Minister, and the further report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of Security Council resolution 745 (1992) of 28 February 1992 which members of the Council have just received, the Council will continue to study the situation in Cambodia and will consider what action it should take.

Decision of 12 October 1993: letter from the President to the Secretary-General

On 7 October 1993, pursuant to resolution 840 (1993), the Secretary-General submitted to the Security Council a further report<sup>49</sup> in which he reported having received a letter dated 26 September 1993 from the Government of Cambodia, requesting the dispatch of some 20 to 30 unarmed United Nations military observers to Cambodia for a period of six months following the end of the UNTAC mandate.<sup>50</sup> That request was made in the context of the tensions that would still remain in Cambodia, after the withdrawal of UNTAC and the need to strengthen confidence among the people. The request was reiterated on 4 October.

The Secretary-General restated his belief that United Nations efforts and resources in Cambodia should henceforth be concentrated on civilian activities in the fields of reconstruction and development, as well as human rights and mine clearance. He was not fully convinced, however, that a small group of military officers based in Phnom Penh would in practice be able to play an effective part in controlling or resolving the remaining security problems in Cambodia. He also voiced doubt about deploying a merely symbolic military presence at a time of acute financial crisis. Should the Security Council decide, however, to respond positively to the request, he would recommend that a team of 20 military liaison officers contributed by Governments, be established for a single period of six months. Those liaison officers would be separate from the proposed integrated office and their mandate would be limited to maintaining liaison with the Government of Cambodia and reporting to the Secretary-General on matters affecting security in Cambodia.

By a letter dated 12 October 1993,<sup>51</sup> the President of the Security Council informed the Secretary-General that the members of the Council had considered his report concerning the request from the Government of Cambodia. They had agreed in principle with his recommendation and invited him to submit as soon as possible a further report setting out in greater detail the proposed objectives, and terms of reference of such a team, together with detailed plans for its dispatch and an estimate of the resources required. The members of the Council also invited the Secretary-General to consider, and address the implications of, the possibility of incorporating the officers in the United Nations office to be established in Cambodia, as had been suggested in the letter from the Government of Cambodia.

Decision of 4 November 1993 (3303rd meeting): resolution 880 (1993)

On 27 October 1993, pursuant to resolution 840 (1993), the Secretary-General submitted to the Security Council a further report setting out the proposed objectives and terms of reference of a military liaison team.<sup>52</sup> The report also addressed the issue of incorporating the team in the proposed United Nations office in Cambodia. In that regard, the Secretary-General reiterated his recommendation that the military liaison team should be separate from the proposed integrated office on the basis that it would seem better to keep the short-term military activity separate from the long-term civilian activities which would be coordinated through the integrated office.

By a letter dated 28 October 1993, addressed to the President of the Security Council,<sup>53</sup> the Secretary-General informed the Council of a request made by the officer-in-charge of the UNTAC withdrawal to extend the deployment of UNTAC military police and medical unit beyond 15 November, owing to deteriorating security conditions in the country. The Secretary-General believed that these limited extensions were necessary in order to ensure the safety and security of UNTAC personnel and its equipment as they completed the withdrawal. He also proposed to extend the deployment of 17 existing members of the Mine Clearance and Training Unit of UNTAC until 30 November 1993.

The Secretary-General also stated that mine clearance would continue to be a major need in the post-conflict peacebuilding in Cambodia. He indicated that the United Nations Trust Fund for Demining in Cambodia would be maintained and that continued technical support and capacity-building would also be required to enable the Cambodian Mine Action Centre to become self-sufficient. The Secretary-General had therefore asked the United Nations Development Programme to enter into consultations with the new Government of Cambodia with a view to providing technical support and capacity-building as required for a limited duration. Pending such arrangements, and in order to avert a damaging break in that important activity, he proposed to extend the deployment of 17 existing members of the Mine Clearance and Training Unit of UNTAC until 30 November 1993.

At its 3303rd meeting, on 4 November 1993, the Security Council included the reports of the Secretary-General of 5, 7 and 27 October, as well as the above-mentioned letter, in its agenda.<sup>54</sup> After the adoption of the agenda, the Council, in accordance with the decisions taken at its 3287th meeting, invited the representatives of Australia, Cambodia and Thailand to participate, in the discussion without the right to vote. The President (Cape Verde) then drew the attention of the members of the Council to the text of a draft resolution prepared in the course of the Council's prior consultations, and read out a revision to be made to the draft in its provisional form.<sup>55</sup>

The draft resolution, as orally revised, was thereupon put to the vote and was adopted unanimously as resolution 880 (1993), which reads:

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolution 745 (1992) of 28 February 1992 concerning the implementation plan of the agreements on a comprehensive political settlement to the Cambodian conflict signed in Paris on 23 October 1991, and subsequent relevant resolutions,

Taking note of the further reports of the Secretary-General of 5 October 1993, 7 October 1993 and 27 October and 3 November 1993, and of his letter dated 28 October 1993 to the President of the Security Council,

Noting with satisfaction the success during the transitional period of the Cambodian people, under the leadership of His Royal Highness Prince Norodom Sihanouk, King of Cambodia, in promoting peace, stability and national reconciliation,

Welcoming the adoption of the constitution in accordance with the Paris agreements on Cambodia,

Recognizing the termination of the mandate of the United Nations Transitional Authority in Cambodia following the establishment of the constitutional government on 24 September 1993 in accordance with the Paris agreements,

Noting with great satisfaction that, with the successful conclusion of the Authority's mission following the election of 23 to 28 May 1993, the goal of the Paris agreements of restoring to the Cambodian people and their democratically elected leaders their primary responsibility for peace, stability, national reconciliation and reconstruction in their country has been achieved,
