

From: Marta Benavides <tlalibertad@gmail.com>

I think the global context is key to all the aspects/points that follow in the report.. so it seems to me that the present situation especially as it is being manifested in the US and global north-- something that is creating a new world order de facto..not only in economics, but also in socio-political-cultural and planetary spaces- AND THE ARMS RACE -- which ARE AND will be directly impacting for decades to come thus directly impacting and defining the economic and financial spaces..thus the repercussions in the rest of the world.. We must see the trends -- we have a 2030 agenda adn 2036 agenda for implementation in the territories..There is a pressing for presence of private enterprise.. so, it might be good to take into account the analysis and plans of the WEF and its various summits both thematic and at regional levels.. In the case of the G20.. its positions have been changing especially in light of the present trends in the north and on famine.. so its analysis adn position on agriculture can give us input on this regard.. the issue of the demographic transition must be part of the analysis as it impacts on needs and numbers..

The UN has clearly stated that the lack of real effective participation of an informed civil society did not permit to achivet the MDGs, and same was the problematic consumption and compsumption patters of the north.. i see the importance of lifting this up.. as this is part of the national as well as systmeci issues, and also about the mobilization of internatresources -- the people and their ancestral practices and knowledge.. in science and tech..

It seems to me that we could underline the fact that an intentional timely informed/organized civil society participation is a must fro real lasting solutions not only at the local and national, regional, but also global levels.. i think that a major part of the solutions is also to have all countries wokr on keeping under 1.5and develop plans from local to national, regional to global on what it means adn how to implement the transformative Just transition, so we are not merely going through a mere transition.. which has been going on, and is going on in our watch.