

Professor Melisew Dejene Lemma

Professor Melisew Dejene Lemma (PhD in Policy and Development Studies) is an Assistant Professor of Development Studies, and Journalism and Communication at the Institute for Policy and Development Research (IPDR) and the Department of Journalism and Communication at Hawassa University, Ethiopia.

Melisew is an International Visitor Leadership Program (IVLP) 2015 alumnus in Contemporary Trends in Higher Education that he traveled to five US States - Washington DC, Maryland, Ohio (Dayton and Columbus), Dallas in Texas and Boston in Massachusetts and attended training and presentations with various US Universities and professional groups among others MIT, Harvard University's Innovation Lab, University of Boston, Northeastern University, Ohio State University, University of Dayton, University of Maryland, Gallaudet University, Wright State University, Central State University, Franklin University, Texas Christian University, Richland College (Dallas County Community College).

Melisew served as Director of Corporate Communication of Hawassa University from 2011 to May 2015, member of Hawassa University's Senate (2011 – May 2015), Hawassa University's Management Council (2011 to May 2015) Founding Member and Board Secretary of Hawassa University's Community Radio (2013 – 2015), Founding Editor-in-Chief of Hawassa University's Quarterly Newsletter (2011 to 2015). He has been a faculty member of Hawassa University since September 2004. He co-initiated various research projects in the area of development, where he served as deputy coordinator and coordinator. He also served as a local researcher for the Research Base, UK (2015).

Melisew attended international workshops and training in Germany, Morocco, Namibia, Norway, South Africa, the UK and the USA.

His research interests include Vulnerability, Social Protection and Social Policy; Empowering women and vulnerable groups; Education and development; Communication and development, as well as Public policy.

Melisew has over 20 publications, including six articles in international peer reviewed journals and eight book chapters.