

High-level Event on Culture and Sustainable Development

on the occasion of the World Day for Cultural Diversity for Dialogue and Development

21 May 2019 – 10:00am – 1:00pm and 3:00pm – 6:00pm

Trusteeship Council Chamber, United Nations Headquarters, New York

Background

The transformative power of culture for social inclusion, resilience and development is increasingly recognized as a key enabler for Sustainable Development. Culture is an essential component of human development, representing a source of identity, innovation and creativity for all. The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development marked a major turning point in global efforts to address development challenges and opportunities. In the fourth year of implementation, local authorities and communities are taking an increasingly important role in this global momentum alongside international and national actors and other relevant stakeholders. Culture can serve as a strong catalyst for these efforts.

In accordance with General Assembly Resolution 72/229 on “Culture and Sustainable Development”, the President of the General Assembly will convene a one-day high-level thematic debate on this important topic, in partnership with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO).

The debate will focus on the contribution of culture to the achievement of the sustainable development goals from the national, regional and international perspectives, building on national experiences, existing policies and frameworks and cooperation. The debate will also mark two important United Nations milestones, which acknowledge the importance of cultural diversity and recognize the critical contribution of indigenous cultures to sustainable development: World Day for Cultural Diversity for Dialogue and Development (21 May); and the International Year of Indigenous Languages (2019).

Objectives

1. Highlight the connection between culture and biological diversity, with particular relation to local solutions to climate change and environmental challenges;
2. Demonstrate the role of culture in providing opportunities for decent work, poverty reduction, social resilience, gender equality and other aspects of Agenda 2030; and
3. Illustrate how culture, artistic education, and creative industries contribute to development, providing innovative solutions in urban, rural, national / local contexts.

Format:

The High-level Event will consist of an opening segment, a roundtable, two panel discussions and a closing segment. An interactive format will be encouraged, and there will be no formal speakers list. Seating arrangements will also be informal, and may be reserved in advance or on the day of the event. The event is open to countries, intergovernmental bodies, organizations of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations in consultative status with ECOSOC, youth representatives and relevant experts and stakeholders.

3:00- 4:15 pm	Panel I: Culture and education: the foundations of sustainability This panel will focus on the culture and education nexus. Education is a key to social change, and a catalyst for achieving most of the SDGs when curricula are adapted to local environments. When mainstreamed in education, culture builds confidence and encourages dialogue; it equips youth to engage in a multicultural society, helps them to achieve better educational results, and leads them to acquire a broader and more diverse range of skills and competences. Culture is also a powerful agent fostering non-formal education and lifelong learning. Guiding Questions: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- In what ways does culture interplay with education?- How do culture and arts education foster social equality and inclusion?- How does culture-empowered education enhance economic opportunities?
