35. Maintenance of international peace and security

During the period under review, the Security Council held three meetings in connection with the item entitled “Maintenance of international peace and security”. Of the three meetings one was a high-level open debate and two were convened to adopt decisions. The Council adopted four resolutions, one of them under Chapter VII of the Charter and issued one presidential statement. More information on the meetings, including on participants, speakers and outcomes, is given in table 1 below. In addition, Council members held nine videoconferences in connection with this item. More information on the videoconferences is given in table 2 below. In addition to meetings and videoconferences, Council members also held informal consultations of the whole and closed videoconferences in connection with this item.

As in previous periods, a broad range of new and existing sub-items of both a thematic as well as a regional nature were discussed in connection with this item. The thematic sub-items were: (i) Upholding the United Nations Charter; (ii) Implications of COVID-19; (iii) Youth, peace and security; (iv) Climate and security; (v) Humanitarian effects of environmental degradation and peace and security; (vi) Global governance after COVID-19 and (vii) Security-sector reform. The region-specific sub-items were: (i) Comprehensive review of the situation in the Persian Gulf region and (ii) Report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of resolution 2491 (2019) relating to the smuggling of migrants and trafficking in persons in the Mediterranean Sea off the coast of Libya.

On 9 January 2020, at the initiative of Vietnam which held the Presidency for the month, the Council held a high-level open debate marking the 75th anniversary of the United Nations on the subject “Upholding the United Nations Charter”. The meeting was resumed twice and was held over a period of three days, on 9, 10 and 13 January 2020. At the meeting, the Council heard briefings by the Secretary-General and the Chair of the Elders, Mrs. Mary Robinson. 944

The Secretary-General noted that the New Year had begun with fresh turmoil and long-standing suffering. He mentioned that geopolitical tensions had reached dangerous levels, most recently in the Gulf. Against this backdrop, he emphasized that the Charter remained the shared framework of international cooperation for the common good, which also served as a reminder of the primacy of the rule of law and human dignity. He reminded Council members that the privilege of United Nations membership carried vital responsibilities to uphold the Charter’s tenets and values, particularly in preventing and addressing conflict.

The Chair of the Elders said that the world was facing two distinct existential threats, namely, nuclear proliferation and the climate crisis. Although responding to those threats was critical, it was harder to implement at a time when multilateral cooperation was being undermined by populism and nationalism. Echoing the Secretary-General, she recalled that Chapter VI of the Charter of the United Nations required parties to any dispute that threatened international peace and security to negotiate or use other peaceful means to resolve their conflict. With reference to the tensions between the United States and the Islamic Republic of Iran, she explained that dialogue and negotiations were urgently needed, and urged Member States participating in the meeting to consider what the United Nations could do to bring them to the table in the spirit of the Charter.

Following the briefings, Council Members and other participants reaffirmed the importance of multilateralism and the need to uphold and respect the purposes and principles of the Charter. The need for the Council to address emerging as well as new threats and the use of force in line with the Charter of the United Nations was also discussed during the meeting. Many speakers emphasized the primary responsibility of the Council for the maintenance of international peace and security, the need for States to make maximum use of the tools available to them under the Charter, especially in the areas of conflict prevention and the peaceful settlement of international disputes, including the role of regional organizations or agencies to address matters relating to the maintenance of international peace and security.945

On 27 April 2020, at the initiative of the Dominican Republic which held the Presidency for the month,946 Council members held a videoconference in connection with this item, under the theme youth, peace and security and specifically entitled “Towards the fifth anniversary of the youth and peace and security agenda: accelerating implementation of resolutions 2250 (2015) and 2419 (2018)”.947 At the videoconference, the members of the Council heard briefings by the Secretary-General, the Secretary-General’s Envoy on Youth, as well as Ms. Olla Al-Sakkaf, Project Coordinator for Youth Without Borders Organization for Development, Yemen, and Mr. Gatwal Augustine Gatkuoth, Founder of the Young Adult Empowerment Initiative, South Sudan/Uganda. At the videoconference, the Secretary-General presented his first report on youth, peace and security,948 and noted that since the issuance of the report, the COVID-19 pandemic had acutely impacted young people, notably, from lost jobs to family stress, mental health and other hardships. More than 1.54 billion children and youth were out of school. Young refugees, displaced persons and others caught up in conflict or disaster now faced even more vulnerability. He added that despite the challenges facing young people, they were still finding ways to engage, to support each other and to demand and drive change on issues such as the battle against COVID-19, supporting the call for a global ceasefire, as well as the battle against climate change. He called on Member States to address those challenges by investing in young people’s participation, organizations and initiatives, including strengthening human rights protections and protecting the civic space on which youth participation depended.949

The Secretary-General’s Envoy on Youth dedicated her statement to all the young people who were putting their communities ahead of themselves in war zones, refugee camps, favelas and settlements. Noting that the year 2020 marked the fifth anniversary of the adoption of the resolution 2250 (2015), she considered it an opportune moment to take stock of the youth, peace and security agenda, its progress and successes, as well as addressing its challenges and gaps. She recommended regular and systematic reporting to the Council on the implementation of resolutions 2250 (2015) and 2419 (2018), and to put young people at the heart of the Council’s efforts to bring about global peace and security.

In their statements, Council members welcomed the Secretary-General’s report and took note of his recommendations for the meaningful participation of young people in peace and security efforts. Many Member States emphasized the core challenges that could have a devastating impact on youth development especially the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic. They called for inclusive, strategic actions and funding for programming and institutional support to further accelerate the youth, peace and security agenda.

On 2 July 2020, at the initiative of Germany which held the Presidency for the month,\textsuperscript{950} the Council held a videoconference under the sub-item, “Implications of COVID-19”.\textsuperscript{951} At the videoconference, Council members heard briefings by the Secretary-General, the President of the International Committee of the Red Cross, and the African Union Commissioner for Social Affairs. The Secretary-General said that the COVID-19 pandemic was fast becoming a protection crisis, which continued to profoundly affect peace and security across the globe. He noted that the pandemic had made diplomacy more challenging. It had also highlighted the risks of bioterrorist attacks showing some of the ways in which preparedness might fall short if a disease were to be deliberately manipulated to be more virulent or intentionally released in multiple places at once. He also expressed concern that the pandemic was triggering or exacerbating human rights challenges, noting that populists, nationalists and others who were already seeking to roll back human rights were finding in the pandemic a pretext for repressive measures unrelated to the disease.

The President of the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) stated that the ICRC was seeing first-hand how the COVID-19 pandemic and its economic aftershocks were deepening fragility, spiking humanitarian needs, accentuating the impact of violence and conflict, opening the doors to alarming levels of stigmatization, increasing global poverty,

Part I – Overview of Security Council Activities in the Maintenance of International Peace and Security
heightening instability and tensions and reversing hard-won development gains. He said that there were six essential lessons for a pandemic response in humanitarian settings, notably: (i) that international humanitarian law needed to be better respected; (ii) assistance and protection available to all those in need without the threat of politicization or manipulation; (iii) response should go far beyond health needs and mitigate the wider secondary impacts of pandemics; (iv) responses to reach the most vulnerable and marginalized community members; (v) proactively guard against any rollback of civilian protections; and (vi) responses would be effective only if there was community trust and engagement.

Following the briefers, Council members discussed the security implications of the COVID-19 pandemic, including its impact on fragile societies and peace operations. Many speakers maintained that the Council had a primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security and should address the effects of the pandemic. They stressed the need for a greater role of the Council in addressing the crisis, while calling for global solidarity and cooperation towards a collective responsibility to protect civilians.952

On 14 July 2020, the Council held a meeting at which it unanimously adopted resolution 2535 (2020).953 At the meeting, the representative of the Dominican Republic also spoke on behalf of France, who was a co-penholder of the draft, and noted that the resolution reflected the Council’s recognition of and support for the pivotal role that young people played in the maintenance of peace and security. Citing the fifth anniversary of the adoption of the first resolution on youth, peace and security, as well as the 75th anniversary of the United Nations, he emphasized the need to listen to and work with young people who were the missing piece for peace and development. He called for the development of a guide dedicated to the protection of young people, including the appointment of focal points for youth, peace and security both within the United Nations system and in countries and regional organizations. The representative of Niger noted that one in four young people were still affected by violence and conflict despite it being five years after the Council had recognized, for the first time, the specific situation of youth in armed conflict. He added that young people lacked educational and economic opportunities, and their human rights were violated and curtailed, even more so during the global coronavirus disease pandemic. It was therefore crucial that the Council not only recognize the specific situation of young people but also leverage their role in and potential for preventing conflicts, for building peaceful and inclusive societies and for effectively addressing humanitarian needs by strengthening the role of young peacebuilders, engaging youth in humanitarian response, and inviting youth organizations to brief the Council. The representative of the Russian Federation expressed his expectation that future discussions on youth issues should be comprehensive in nature. Regarding youth participation in peace processes, including peace settlements and peacebuilding, he stated that it was important to eliminate obstacles, including by introducing preventive measures with respect to the spread of extremist ideologies and terrorism among young people.

On 24 July 2020, Council members held a videoconference under the theme “Climate and security” at which they were briefed by the Assistant Secretary-General for Europe, Central Asia and the Americas; Colonel Mahamadou Seydou Magagi, Director, Centre National d’Études Stratégiques et de Sécurité; and Ms. Coral Pasisi, Director, Sustainable Pacific Consultancy Niue. The Assistant Secretary-General for Europe, Central Asia and the Americas stated that the climate emergency was a danger to peace. Although there was no automatic link between climate change and conflict, he noted that climate change did exacerbate existing risks and created new ones, and that the consequences varied from region to region. To cope with climate change, he stressed the need to leverage new technologies and enhance the analytical capacity to translate long-term climate foresight into actionable, near-term analysis, as well as to strengthen multidimensional partnerships. In his statement, Colonel Magagi addressed the extent to which climate change was impacting the livelihoods of citizens in the Sahel. He examined the broader consequences of climate change on regional security, while highlighting the role of Niger in alleviating climate change. He proposed that the United Nations should conduct an integrated climate security assessment before assisting countries, including assisting in building national-to-local capabilities to monitor and manage climate change effects, as well as task United Nations country teams that were in contact with relevant Government bodies to collect authoritative information on the impact of climate-related security risks in conflict settings and make those results available to the States Members of the United Nations. Ms. Pasisi highlighted the effects of climate change on the Pacific small island developing States (SIDS). She called on the Council to continue to build on and integrate the best available science, modelling and risk assessments into its work and to coordinate with the many existing efforts already under way across the development, climate change and humanitarian bodies of practice.

Many Council members and other Member States emphasized that the Council must work within its mandate to address the impact of climate change on the situations on its agenda, including through regular reporting, while other speakers cautioned against it. Several speakers also called for the appointment of a Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Climate and Security.

On 9 September 2020, at the initiative of Niger which held the Presidency for the month, Council members held a videoconference at which they were briefed by the Under-Secretary-General for Political and Peacebuilding Affairs, the Under-Secretary-General for Peace Operations, and the Under-Secretary-General for Humanitarian Affairs and Emergency Relief Coordinator on the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic. In her briefing, the Under-Secretary-General for Political and Peacebuilding Affairs highlighted three heightened risks, namely, the erosion of trust in public institutions, the aggravation of certain human rights challenges during the pandemic, and the risk to political and peace processes. She also acknowledged that contrary to expectations, a significant change in the dynamics of a number of ongoing armed conflicts as a result of COVID-19 had not been observed. She also provided an update on the status of the Secretary-General’s call on 23 March 2020 for a global ceasefire, noting that the initial response was encouraging with a number of temporary truces announced but that many had expired without extensions, resulting in little improvement on the ground. She also noted that special representatives, envoys and mediators had stepped up efforts to advance political and peace discussions in a number of regions and addressed how operations had been adapted in the midst of the pandemic. The Under-Secretary-General for Peace Operations provided an update on the measures taken to address the enormous challenges posed by the COVID-19 pandemic to peacekeeping operations and to the countries where they were deployed. He stated that with the unified and consistent backing of the Council, peacekeeping operations had quickly and effectively put in place a range of measures that had ensured operational continuity and ongoing mandate implementation across all operations. The Under-Secretary-General for Humanitarian Affairs and Emergency Relief Coordinator said that there were growing reasons to believe that in the medium and longer term the weakest, most fragile and conflict-affected countries would be those worst affected by COVID-19. He pointed out that beyond the economy, the biggest indirect effect of the virus was on public services, especially health and education, and warned that inadequate economic and political action from the international community could lead to greater instability and conflicts in the coming years and result in more crises on the agenda of the Council. He also addressed the launch of United Nations-coordinated Global Humanitarian Response Plan for COVID-19 in March 2020 by the Secretary-General describing how it had been used to combat the pandemic.

Council members commended peacekeepers and humanitarian workers assisting in the implementation of the COVID-19 response plans. They emphasized the need for continued support to peacekeeping operations to strengthen their medical capacities to ensure the safety, security, and health of peacekeepers as well as to enable them to fully implement their mandates despite the pandemic. Many speakers referred to resolution 2532 (2020) as a step in the right direction in addressing the impact of COVID-19 on international peace and security and urged all relevant parties to respect the call of the Secretary-General for a global ceasefire.

On 17 September 2020, at the initiative of Niger,959 Council members held a videoconference in connection with this item and under the sub-item “Humanitarian effects of environmental degradation and peace and security”, during which they were briefed by the President of the International Committee of the Red Cross, Executive Secretary of the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification and Ms. Inna Modja, Land Ambassador and environmental activist. The President of the International Committee of the Red Cross called for a more in-depth policy reflections on the links between environmental degradation, climate risk, humanitarian needs, and peace and security. He cited climate shocks as a key issue of concern, alongside poverty and injustice for people affected by conflict and explained the twofold focus of the ICRC to mitigate the impacts of conflict and protect communities from harm as well as to respect the international humanitarian law to enhance the protection of the environment. He noted that the cumulative pressures of conflict, climate change and environmental degradation could affect the survival of communities living in the Sahel and Lake Chad region. He affirmed that peace and security would not be established by focusing on military and security measures to curb conflict and violence. Acknowledging that many would agree in general terms on the linkages between peace, security and the climate and environment, he noted that the “how” of the response still needed more critical analysis and sharing of experiences, adding that the ICRC would welcome regular and systematic discussions on the issue. The Executive Secretary of the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification stated that an assessment of the root causes of conflicts showed that a large proportion had a link to the environment which might either be due to the abundance of natural resources such as oil, minerals or wildlife, or to scarcity of land, water or vegetation. He cautioned that to prevent conflicts while protecting the planet, the international community ought to first tackle the effects of environment degradation. Ms. Modja emphasized the urgency to find solutions to the consequences of desertification and climate change and the impact that it could have on security and peace.

Following the briefers, speakers addressed a variety of themes, including the effects of the destruction of the natural environment in armed conflict, the humanitarian consequences of climate change and land degradation and how to better adapt and implement the climate mechanisms, international law and policies to contribute to the protection of the environment and natural resources in order to prevent armed conflict. Many speakers called on the Council to act in an integrated and coherent approach in addressing these multidimensional challenges.

On 24 September 2020, again at the initiative of Niger, Council members held a videoconference under the sub-item of global governance after COVID-19, and were briefed by the Secretary-General and Chairperson of the African Union Commission. Noting that COVID-19 pandemic was a full-blown crisis unfolding against a backdrop of high geopolitical tensions, the Secretary-General said that the pandemic was a clear test of international cooperation that the international community had failed due to a lack of global preparedness, cooperation, unity and solidarity. As the United Nations marked its 75th anniversary in 2020, the Secretary-General emphasized the need for innovative thinking on global governance and multilateralism fit for the 21st century. He added that the General Assembly Declaration on the Commemoration of the 75th anniversary had created space for a process of reflection on the future of multilateral cooperation and the post-COVID world. The Chairperson of the African Union Commission stressed the need for effective global governance and called upon all States to recommit to a collaborative approach to the pandemic response while highlighting the initiatives of the African Union in addressing the crisis including the establishment of an African Special Fund for the COVID-19 response.

Following the briefers, Council members discussed the need for global governance reform to strengthen convergence towards sustainable global peace and security, especially during the pandemic. Several speakers highlighted the challenges faced with the World Health Organization (WHO) while calling for its strengthening to adequately respond to the global pandemic. The representative of the United States stated that the decision of its government to withdraw from WHO was due to its lack of independence, transparency, and accountability. Most speakers expressed their support for the Secretary-General’s call for a global ceasefire amid the pandemic.

Secretary-General, the President and Chief Executive Officer of the International Crisis Group and the President of the Institute of Oriental Studies of the Russian Academy of Sciences. The Secretary-General stated that given the complex and multifaceted challenges in the Persian Gulf region, it was important to reflect more deeply on how the international community, particularly the Council, could work in unison to promote peace and security in that vital part of the world. Referring to the situation in Yemen, he expressed concern that nearly six years of war had devastated the lives of millions of Yemenis and had undermined confidence-building efforts in the region. He reiterated his appeal for an immediate global ceasefire to focus on the battle against the COVID-19 pandemic. Concerning regional stability, the Secretary-General stated that the issue of nuclear nonproliferation was critical, while expressing his support to the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA), as an important instrument against nuclear proliferation. As the United Nations marked its 75th anniversary, the Secretary-General noted that the Organization would continue its work to help reduce tensions in the Persian Gulf region. The President and Chief Executive Officer of the International Crisis Group cautioned that conditions for a war that would affect not just the Gulf but the broader Middle East were arguably riper than at any time in recent memory and could break out in any of a number of places. He noted that the aspirations of the people of the Middle East for decent and peaceful lives had been stymied by rivalries and lack of cooperation among their Governments. In his remarks, he addressed some of the causes as well as the possible remedies. Noting the absence of any institutional mechanism for parties to air their grievances, he affirmed that the Gulf region needed to initiate a collective and inclusive security dialogue encompassing the six members of the Gulf Cooperation Council, the Islamic Republic of Iran and Iraq, aiming at diminishing tensions. The United Nations, too, could play an important role. Resolution 598 (1987), which ended the Iran-Iraq war, he said, provided a mandate for the Secretary-General to convene a regional security dialogue to lay the groundwork for a security architecture tolerable to all sides. He added that the main threat faced with the region then was not so much a war of choice but an inadvertent one resulting from miscalculation, misinterpretation or lack of timely communication.
In his statement, the President of the Institute of Oriental Studies of the Russian Academy of Sciences stated that owing to the tremendous geoeconomic and geostrategic significance and openness of the Gulf subregion, tensions were increasing, seriously threatening security, political and economic stability in the subregion. He expressed support for collective, solidarity-based efforts free of confrontational approaches and demonization. It was this approach that was laid down in the concept of collective security in the Persian Gulf proposed by the Russian Federation in 2019, the implementation of which would allow the normalization of the situation in the subregion. In that regard, he recalled that in August, the President of the Russian Federation had put forward a proposal to convene a summit of the five permanent members of the Security Council, with the participation of the Islamic Republic of Iran and Germany, in order to agree on the parameters of joint efforts aimed at the creation of reliable mechanisms for ensuring security and strengthening confidence-building measures in the Persian Gulf zone. He also mentioned that the issue of confidence-building measures and transparency was key to the initial stage of the process of a rapprochement among the parties.

Further to the briefings, Council members discussed the challenges in the Persian Gulf region, while urging the Council to support regional initiatives. They emphasized the urgent need for peaceful solutions to the crises in Yemen, the Syrian Arab Republic and other parts of the Gulf region. The need for a unified approach and multilateral diplomacy to enhance efforts towards building trust and confidence throughout the region was also stressed by Member States. Some participants endorsed the development of a regional security architecture in collaboration with the United Nations and international partners to address the security concerns of all stakeholders, while the representative of the United States noted that the international community did not need yet another mechanism to promote Gulf security.

On 3 December 2020, at the initiative of South Africa which held the Presidency for the month, Council members held a videoconference under the sub-item of security sector reform. Council members were briefed by the Assistant Secretary-General for Africa, Departments of Political and Peacebuilding Affairs and Peace Operations, Assistant Secretary-General for Rule of Law and Security Institutions, Department of Peace Operations, and the African Union Commissioner for Peace and Security. In her briefing, the Assistant Secretary-General for Africa acknowledged that there was a broad recognition that security sector governance was a key element of United Nations support to national efforts to sustain peace and prevent the outbreak, escalation, continuation and recurrence of conflict across the entire peace continuum. Expectations, however, needed to be realistic. She pointed out that security-sector governance and reform was a complex and long-term endeavour, sometimes spanning a generation and requiring a deep understanding of the root causes of a conflict, sustained political will to overcome resistance and the space to implement difficult political decisions. In her statement she put forth three recommendations to the Council and Member States to optimally position the United Nations in advancing nationally-owned and led security sector governance and reform efforts by, firstly, recognizing security-sector governance and reform primarily as political processes and ensuring that peace operation mandates on security sector reform were linked to broader political objectives; secondly, systematically recognizing the coordination role of the United Nations and the necessity of partnerships as means to align international assistance with national security sector priorities; and, thirdly, supporting inclusive security sector reform processes and prioritizing efforts aiming at increasing women’s participation in national security services by identifying and addressing systemic barriers to their recruitment, retention and promotion.

The Assistant Secretary-General for Rule of Law and Security Institutions elaborated on the United Nations’ role in assisting national authorities in building an effective and accountable security sector. He noted, however, that challenges persisted. United Nations regional offices and special envoys lacked reliable security sector reform capacity, particularly in the context of implementing the Secretary-General’s conflict-prevention agenda. The mismatch between financial needs and the resources availed and committed to by donors was a major concern in many countries. Ensuring an effective division of labour and fostering the strategic coherence of international assistance, including in the context of implementing political agreements continued to be a challenge.
The African Union Commissioner for Peace and Security briefed on the initiatives of the African Union in assisting Member States to address the challenges in security sector governance and reform. According to him, the African Union Master Roadmap of Practical Steps to Silence the Guns in Africa by the Year 2020 acknowledged that the failure to transform African defence and security forces into professional and disciplined national security institutions subjected to civilian oversight and control had often led to the eruption of, or relapse into conflicts, thus perpetuating cycles of violence and disrupting stabilization and peace-building efforts. He noted that since the adoption of its security sector reform policy framework in 2013, the African Union had continued to deploy efforts to assist Member States in addressing the challenges of security sector governance and reform. He also underlined that the African Union was mindful that the governance of the security sector was a sine qua non for peacebuilding and sustaining peace. However, it was politically complex, long term and often costly and therefore required full engagement by State and non-State stakeholders, with strong national ownership guided by high-level political leadership.

Following the briefings, Council members highlighted their countries’ initiatives in the implementation of security sector governance reform. Speakers discussed the linkages between security sector governance and reform and peacebuilding and sustaining peace, including the importance of providing resources and sustainable funding for activities related to security sector reform initiatives. Participants also stressed the role played by the United Nations in improving the effectiveness of peace operations as well as the strengthening of security sector governance and nationally led reform. Many speakers called for inclusive security sector reform processes and prioritization efforts aimed at increasing women’s participation in the security services. The representative of South Africa stated that her country had undertaken to update resolution 2151(2014) to make it more relevant, taking into account the evolving situation regarding the realisation of the objectives of security sector governance and reform. The adoption of resolution 2553 (2020) was announced at the same videoconference. In the explanation of the vote on the resolution submitted by the Deputy Permanent Representative of the United Kingdom, he indicated that his delegation welcomed the intent of the penholder to update resolution 2151 (2014) to reflect progress in the development of normative and operational frameworks on security sector reform. However, while sufficiently content to vote in favour of resolution 2553 (2020), due to the importance of its subject matter, he highlighted some concerns which had led his delegation to qualify the United Kingdom’s support. First, he noted that the process of penholding ahead of the resolution’s tabling fell far short of the expectations and standards of Council practice. Secondly, he said that for security sector reform to be successful and sustainable, it had to be inclusive and participatory. In that regard, he made clear that the United Kingdom would continue to interpret the content of the resolution as meaning that international security sector reform efforts should be delivered in full accordance with the principles of women’s empowerment and gender equality set out in resolution 1325 (2000) and all other relevant resolutions on women and peace and security.

In 2020, the Council adopted four resolutions and issued one presidential statement in connection with this item. The decisions of the Council addressed some of the themes outlined above. In a presidential statement issued on 9 January 2020, on the occasion of the 75th anniversary of the United Nations, the Council reaffirmed its commitment to the Charter of the United Nations, including the purposes and principles of the Charter and called on Member States to fully comply with the Charter through mainstreaming the purposes and principles of the Charter into policymaking and implementation mechanisms. The Council stressed the need for enhanced inclusive dialogue in the interest of all Member States to share different experiences, national best practices and lessons learned in implementing their obligations under the Charter. The Council also reaffirmed its commitment to multilateralism and the central role of the United Nations. While recognizing the United Nations’ positive contribution over 75 years to upholding the Charter, the Council underscored the importance of the widest possible dissemination of in-depth knowledge of the Charter and encouraged the Secretary-General and relevant United Nations agencies to incorporate activities to promote the role of the Charter in their programmes to commemorate the 75th anniversary of the United Nations. further underlined the importance of the role of regional and sub-regional organizations and arrangements and of cooperation with them, consistent with Chapter VIII of the Charter of the United Nations.\footnote{Ibid., sixth paragraph.}

On 1 July 2020, the Council unanimously adopted resolution\footnote{Resolution 2532 (2020), eighth preambular paragraph.} \textit{2532 (2020)}, recognizing the efforts and measures proposed by the Secretary-General concerning the response to the potential impact of the COVID-19 pandemic to conflict-affected countries, in particular his appeal for an immediate global ceasefire.\footnote{Ibid., paras. 1 and 2.} The Council demanded a general and immediate cessation of hostilities in all situations on its agenda and called upon all parties to armed conflicts to engage immediately in a durable humanitarian pause for at least 90 consecutive days, in order to enable the safe, unhindered and sustained delivery of humanitarian assistance, provisions of related services by impartial humanitarian actors, in accordance with the humanitarian principles of humanity, neutrality, impartiality and independence, and medical evacuations, in accordance with international law, including international humanitarian law and refugee law as applicable.\footnote{Ibid., paras. 1 and 2.} The Council requested the Secretary-General to (i) help ensure that all relevant parts of the United Nations system, including UN Country Teams, in accordance with their respective mandates, accelerate their response to the COVID-19 pandemic; (ii) provide updates to the Council on the United Nations efforts to address the COVID-19 pandemic in countries in situations of armed conflict or affected by humanitarian crises, as well as on the impact of COVID-19 on the ability of peace-keeping operations and Special Political Missions to deliver their mandated priority tasks; and (iii) instruct peace-keeping operations to provide support, within their mandates and capacities, to host country authorities in their efforts to contain the pandemic, in particular to facilitate humanitarian access, including to internally displaced persons and refugee camps and allow for medical evacuations. The Council further requested the Secretary-General and Member States to take all appropriate steps to protect the safety, security and health of all personnel in the United Nations peace operations, while maintaining the... continuity of operations, and to take further steps towards the provision of training for peacekeeping personnel on issues related to preventing the spread of COVID-19.978

On 14 July 2020, the Council unanimously adopted resolution 2535 (2020), taking note of the first report of the Secretary-General of 2 March 2020 on youth peace and security.979 By the resolution, the Council called on all relevant actors, to consider ways to increase the inclusive representation of youth for the prevention and resolution of conflict as well as in peacebuilding and urged Member States to protect youth from violence in armed conflict and to facilitate an inclusive, safe, enabling and gender-responsive environment in which youth actors were recognized and provided with adequate support and protection to implement violence prevention activities and support social cohesion.980 The Council also stressed the importance of providing opportunities for young people to strengthen resilience against radicalization to violence and terrorist recruitment and of creating policies for youth that would positively contribute to peacebuilding efforts.981 The Council requested the Secretary-General and his Special Envoys to include the views of youth in relevant discussions pertinent to the maintenance of peace and security, peacebuilding and sustaining peace, and to facilitate the full, effective and meaningful participation of youth at all decision-making levels. The Council further requested the Secretary-General to provide guidance for all peacekeeping and other relevant United Nations missions on the implementation of the youth, peace and security agenda and to develop a dedicated guidance on the protection of young people. The Secretary-General was also requested to include information and related recommendations on issues of relevance to young people, in the context of armed conflict and to submit a biennial report to the Council on the implementation of the resolution including resolutions 2250 (2015) and 2419 (2018).982

On 2 October 2020, the Council unanimously adopted resolution 2546 (2020) renewing the authorizations regarding acts of migrant smuggling and human trafficking in Libya’s territorial sea as set out in paragraphs 7, 8, 9 and 10 of resolution 2240 (2015), for a further
