23. United Nations peacekeeping operations

During the period under review, the Security Council did not hold any meetings in connection with the item entitled “United Nations peacekeeping operations”. Council members did, however, hold six open videoconferences in connection with this item. More information on the videoconferences is given in the table below. In addition, the Council adopted resolution 2518 (2020) of 30 March 2020 on the safety and security of United Nations peacekeepers and resolution 2538 (2020) of 28 August 2020 on the role of women in peacekeeping. The resolutions were announced in open videoconferences, according to the procedures established further to the outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic.670

In 2020, Council members discussed the role of human rights in United Nations peacekeeping operations and also held their annual briefing on peacekeeping reform and meetings with selected force commanders and police commissioners. Council members were briefed twice by the Under-Secretary-General for Peace Operations and once each by the Assistant Secretary-General for Rule of Law and Security Institutions, the force commanders of the United Nations Multidimensional Integrated Stabilization Mission in Mali (MINUSMA) and the United Nations Mission in South Sudan (UNMISS), the Deputy Force Commander of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF), the police commissioners of the United Nations Integrated Office in Haiti (BINUH), United Nations Multidimensional Integrated Stabilization Mission in the Central African Republic (MINUSCA) and the United Nations Integrated Stabilization Mission in Mali (MINUSMA), as well as a non-governmental organization representative from the Democratic Republic of the Congo.

On 30 March 2020, the Council unanimously adopted resolution 2518 (2020), by which it underscored the importance of ensuring that missions evolve their capacities and systems to remain agile and effective in implementing their mandates in specific operating contexts to enhance safety and security and mission protection, including through the provision of adequate medical facilities and critical capabilities.\textsuperscript{671} In this regard, the resolution requested the Secretary-General to continue to take all appropriate measures to strengthen, where necessary, the situational awareness of missions through measures to improve their information acquisition and analysis capacities.\textsuperscript{672} The Council called for measures to enhance operational health support, ensure adequate medical facilities and the deployment of qualified personnel.\textsuperscript{673} The Council requested the Secretary-General to review and ensure uniformity of United Nations standards on training and performance and on the United Nations to further operationalize the Light Coordination Mechanism, to facilitate and further coordinate improved training and capacity-building activities between Member States.\textsuperscript{674} Moreover, troop- and police-contributing countries and field missions were encouraged to support field-focused, reliable and cost-effective new technologies.\textsuperscript{675} The resolution further called upon Member States and the United Nations to ensure safe, enabling and gender-sensitive work environments for women in peacekeeping operations and to address threats and violence against them.\textsuperscript{676}

On 4 June 2020, Council members held, in the context of an open videoconference, the annual briefing with selected force commanders of United Nations peacekeeping operations.\textsuperscript{677} Opening the videoconference, the Under-Secretary-General for Peace Operations stated that peacekeeping operations, including their military components, had shown their capacity to adapt to the COVID-19 pandemic by protecting their personnel and capacity to conduct critical operations, containing and mitigating the spread of the virus, supporting national authorities in their responses, and protecting vulnerable communities. In the light of the pandemic, the Secretariat reprioritized activities on strengthening peacekeeping as part of the “Action for Peacekeeping” initiative to ensure a focus on specific objectives that could be delivered within the next few months.\textsuperscript{678}

In addition to addressing the main challenges in their respective theaters of operation, the Force Commanders of MINUSMA and UNMISS and the Deputy Force Commander of UNDOF focused their remarks on the steps their missions had taken to prevent the spread of the pandemic and ensure the continuity of mandate operations. The Force Commander of MINUSMA noted that the Mission’s military component had implemented a strict quarantine policy, strict prioritizations of air operations and specific instructions for patrols to limit interactions with the population. Notwithstanding these measures, he said he had made it clear that it was not the time for the force to take a step back. Instead, he said that the Mission would continue to focus on the core priorities of the mandate and, at the same time, set conditions for adaptation, focusing on finding a proper balance among ends, ways and means. He also noted that the Mission had made a great deal of improvement in the area of providing its peacekeepers with safety and security, and that there had been far fewer fatalities compared to the previous year. The Force Commander of UNMISS briefed Council members on the readjustment of the Mission’s military component with a reduction of the number of troops conducting static protection duties at protection of civilians camps and their redeployment in conflict zones. The Deputy Force Commander of UNDOF informed Council members of plans and efforts to resume military inspections of the Alpha and Bravo sides of the ceasefire line. As key operational challenges, she noted ongoing violations of the Disengagement of Forces Agreement and a deteriorating security situation in the Dara’a governorate in the Syrian Arab Republic with a shift of security incidents closer to the Force’s area of operations.

On 7 July 2020, at the initiative of Germany, Council members held an open videoconference on peace operations and human rights chaired by the Federal Minister of Defence of Germany. Briefing Council members, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights shared the view that human rights were central to the mandate of the Council to maintain international peace and security. Six peacekeeping operations and six special political missions had human rights components which contributed to the overall mission objectives to support political and peace processes. In this regard, the Call to Action for Human Rights of the Secretary-General was an important element in ensuring that human rights served as a shared effective basis of the United Nations system and in reinforcing collective engagement, contribution and the responsibility of all components of peace operations in advancing human rights.

The High Commissioner highlighted examples of the work and achievements of human rights components in peace operations, including on monitoring and reporting, conflict prevention and the protection of civilians, supporting accountability mechanisms, capacity-building, and the implementation of the Human Rights Due Diligence Policy on United Nations support to non-United Nations security forces. Moreover, she stated that grounding regional operations in respect for human rights was crucial to their success, and noted that her Office was supporting the development of a compliance framework for the Joint Force of the Group of Five for the Sahel. The High Commissioner concluded by underlining that human rights components required resources and the strong political support of Council members to bind all peace operations around a common effective approach to crisis, from prevention to recovery.

The Special Representative of the Secretary-General for South Sudan and Head of UNMISS stated that human rights was a core business of the Mission, as it was central both to peace and security and to the protection of civilians. UNMISS had structured its approach to human rights work into three broad streams, namely documentation and holding abusers to account through definitive reporting and rapid investigation, ending impunity and ensuring accountability by capacity-building through mobile courts and the strengthening of police and the judicial system, and engagement with the Government through action plans with national military and police forces and the forces of the Sudan People’s Liberation Movement in Opposition to create the conditions within these forces for the respect of human rights.

Describing the situation of human rights in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, the President of Groupe LOTUS and Honorary Vice-President of the International Federation for Human Rights noted the cooperation between the United Nations Joint Human Rights Office (UNJHRO) within the United Nations Stabilization Operation in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUSCO) and civil society organizations on information gathering and training, the provision of technical, logistical and security support, and advocacy and awareness-raising. during the COVID-19 pandemic. He emphasized the importance of strengthening political dialogue with the authorities at the national and local levels, of protecting civilians and of providing resources for UNJHRO-MONUSCO’s activities. He also called for the strengthening of the presence of MONUSCO throughout the country and for more engagement between civil society and the Mission in future assessments and exit strategy planning efforts.

Council members and other Member States emphasized the important role of human rights to the achievement of the overall objectives of United Nations peacekeeping operations.
As key elements for the effective implementation of human rights mandates, Council members and other Member States cited the need for peacekeeping mandates to be clear and achievable, adequate resources and expertise, training, and the increased deployment of women and their meaningful participation at all levels of decision-making. Several statements also underlined the importance of preventing and ensuring the accountability of peacekeepers for human rights violations, including sexual exploitation and abuse.681 Some speakers expressed regret that the topic of human rights had been politicized.682 The representatives of China and the Russian Federation stressed that human rights were auxiliary to the main objectives of peace operations, namely to support the political settlement of hotspot issues and to promote reconciliation and peacebuilding.683 Some Council members also maintained that human rights mandates should be undertaken in a context-specific manner, taking into account the specific situation of the country and the mandate as well as the local customs and values.684 Several speakers called for respect for the basic principles of peacekeeping in this context, including sovereignty and national ownership of human rights processes.685 Some also highlighted the need for closer cooperation with host States, particularly on human rights capacity-building efforts.686

On 28 August 2020, the Council unanimously adopted resolution 2538 (2020) by which it called upon Member States, the Secretariat and regional organizations to strengthen their collective efforts to promote the full, effective, and meaningful participation of uniformed and civilian women in peacekeeping operations at all levels and in all positions, including in senior leadership. The resolution requested Member States to implement a number of strategies and measures for this purpose, including: (a) disseminating information and providing access to deployment opportunities; (b) providing access to training; (c) developing a national database of trained women personnel; (d) identifying and addressing barriers in the recruitment, deployment, and promotion of women peacekeepers; (e) considering ways, as appropriate, to increase the participation of women in national militaries and police; (f) supporting the capacities of regional organizations in training; and (g) taking measures to provide support and incentives including child care and other relevant needs. Furthermore, the Council called upon Member States and the Secretariat to ensure safe, enabling and gender-sensitive working environments for women in peacekeeping operations and urged them, where appropriate, to provide adequate and appropriate infrastructure and facilities for women in the missions. In the resolution, the Council also urged peacekeeping operations to promote full, effective and meaningful participation of women in all components and functions and at all levels at headquarters and in the field, including through the establishment of mixed engagement teams.

On 14 September 2020, at an open videoconference, the Under-Secretary-General for Peace Operations provided his annual briefing to Council members, further to resolution 2378 (2017), on efforts to strengthen peacekeeping as part of the “Action for Peacekeeping” initiative. He stated that the challenging COVID-related circumstances had not impeded peacekeeping missions to provide effective support to political processes and the implementation of peace agreements. He also expressed encouragement from the progress made on the women and peace and security agenda which was enabled by a greater focus on data-driven tracking and noted the expansion of political space for women’s participation and leadership in peace and political processes across peacekeeping contexts. He also observed that although the pandemic had affected the footprint of missions and restricted some patrolling, missions had taken creative steps to continue their protection work. More broadly, across the four large multidimensional missions, he said that major force transformation processes had been conducted to shift mission postures and presence in order to strengthen strategic flexibility and operational adaptation. Progress was also made in improving mission performance with the roll out of the comprehensive performance assessment system and the finalization of the integrated peacekeeping performance and accountability framework. Measures were taken to ensure the operational readiness, including COVID-19 preparedness, of military and police units, increased representation of women at both Headquarters and in missions, as well as to strengthen the safety and security of personnel, and to strengthen partnerships with regional organizations and troop- and police-contributing countries.

Looking ahead, the Under-Secretary-General stated that, two years after the launch of the initiative, the Secretariat had developed strategic priorities for the next phase of its implementation. In this regard, it was necessary to, inter alia, link all peacekeeping actions to overarching political strategies that furthered positive peace, ensure more substantive and strategic integration with development and peacebuilding actors, further enhance performance and accountability, and implement the United Nations action plan for improving the security of United Nations peacekeeping. He also addressed the need to apply a gender perspective across all areas of work. In their remarks, Council members welcomed the progress made on peacekeeping reform and recognized the challenges and versatility of peacekeeping operations in adapting their work to the pandemic. Council members stressed the importance of continuing to strengthen performance and accountability frameworks. Discussions also addressed the need for sufficient resources and capacities, including training and equipment, further improvements on safety and security, strengthening cooperation with troop- and police-contributing countries and regional organizations, and to increase the number of women personnel.

On 4 November 2020, Council members held the annual meeting with police commissioners via an open videoconference. In his opening remarks, the Assistant Secretary-General for Rule of Law and Security Institutions provided an overview and examples of the work of police components in peace operations on partnerships with regional organizations, the protection of civilians, the implementation of performance evaluation standards and training, gender-responsive policing and enhancing women’s participation, and reinforcing the zero-tolerance policy for sexual exploitation and abuse.\(^{692}\)

The Police Commissioner of BINUH highlighted the capacity-building work of the Mission’s police component in support of the Haitian National Police to improve labour relations, achieve gender equality and prevent sexual and gender-based violence. The Police Commissioner of UNMISS stated that, with the onset of the pandemic, the Mission’s police component had reduced its footprint inside of protection of civilians sites, but continued to respond to security situations and provide technical support to the South Sudan National Police Service, and also conducted sensitization activities on COVID-19. The police component was also playing a key role in the redesignation of protection of civilians sites to internally displaced persons camps.

The Police Commissioner of MINUSCA underlined that, in order to further improve the performance of the United Nations police, it was necessary to provide them with “attention, space and breathing room”. In this regard, he noted the accomplishments of the Mission’s police component in, inter alia, the use of community policing to improve the security situation in the PK5 district of Bangui, support elections, and maintain resilience during the pandemic. The Police Commissioner of MINUSMA underscored the important contribution of police components in the transitions from peacekeeping to peacebuilding and to the success of exit strategies, as well as their supporting role in political processes and conflict resolution. In their remarks, Council members addressed various aspects of the function of police components, including their role in protecting civilians, the need to allocate sufficient and sustainable financial, operational and human resources as well as the need to further improve their performance and accountability. Moreover, several Council members called for gender-responsive policing as well as for the equal participation of women in police components. The representative of Tunisia, speaking on behalf of the A3+1, namely the African members of the Council and Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, requested the Secretary-General to submit to the
