GreenMax Capital Group is launching new risk mitigation facility, the Green-4-Access (G4A) First Loss Facility, which will partner with local financial institutions (LFIs) across Africa to scale up local currency debt financing for energy access. During this event, we will discuss the important role that LFIs can and should play in the energy access finance ecosystem. We approach this from four main perspectives: (1) Energy access funding needs in Sub-Saharan Africa cannot be met without leveraging in private capital and LFIs are one crucial part of the private capital ecosystem; (2) Foreign exchange risk creates huge exposure for Distributed Energy Services Companies (DESCOs); LFIs are best suited to provide local currency financing; (3) The off-grid sector is overburdened with on-balance sheet financing; LFIs can provide direct consumer lending to PAYG customers to relieve this burden; (4) African-owned energy access companies have struggled to raise capital. LFIs are a natural match to finance companies from their own countries. Yet, to date, few African LFIs have engaged in lending for energy access due to very high perceptions of risk. During the discussion, stakeholders from the off-grid industry will share information about the financing challenges they are facing and the importance of a first-loss facility like G4A to catalyze lending for energy access in Sub-Saharan Africa.
