Chapeau

The safety of the world's children and young people is paramount for our global future and security. Sharing fundamental life skills with young people enables them to protect themselves and others in their communities, creating safer physical environments for society at large and future generations. Physical safety education is vital as we experience unprecedented global threats including climate change, societal inequality, biosecurity, wars and harnessing technological advances for good. Physical safety encourages trust and partnerships which the globe can only benefit from - creating a safer tomorrow for all generations. The Safety Centre specializes in physical, interactive and immersive safety education for children, young people and adults. The skills they share are vital for all to experience to encourage safe behaviors, reduce violence and create caring global communities.

Chapter IV. Youth and future generations

The Safety Centre is a charity specializing in safety education for children, young people and adults. We believe that the immersive, interactive safety education we deliver across the United Kingdom must be rolled out across the globe through a network of education specialists to ensure that all in society understand how to keep themselves and others safe in our challenging, fractured world. We propose developing a global safety education initiative led by the Safety Centre in partnership with the UN and global education authorities, tailored for children and young people worldwide. Accompanied by international, national and regional youth safety panels supporting education delivery by sharing key safety themes relevant to children worldwide and at regional levels, influencing local education outputs.

Children and young people thrive when they feel safe, as do adults. When we feel unsafe we employ self-preservation coping mechanisms, forgoing behaviors that foster global citizenship. Nurturing safe, collaborative communities is essential for our future global security in our rapidly changing world; ensuring young people feel safe when online, walking the streets, engaging with their peers and diverse, growing communities. Safety education empowers learners to play an active, responsible, collaborative role as global citizens- sowing the seeds for a culture of peace.
