Simona Cruciani serves as a Political Affairs Officer at the United Nations Office on Genocide Prevention and the Responsibility to Protect (OSAPG) where she runs the Global Programme with Religious Leaders on Preventing Incitement to Violence that could lead to Atrocity Crimes and she is focal point for the implementation of the United Nations Strategy and Plan of Action on Hate Speech. Before joining the OSAPG, Simona served in United Nations field operations, respectively from 2004 to 2006 in the United Nations Peacekeeping Mission in Burundi as an Electoral and Civil Affairs Officer, and from 2006 to 2008 at the United Nations Peacekeeping Mission in Sudan as a Civil Affairs Officer. Simona’s focus has primarily been on preventing and responding to atrocity crimes as well as supporting human security, democratization and human rights in conflict and post-conflict situations. Simona owns master’s degrees in Contemporary History, International Affairs and Public Health.

Sarah M. Cushman is Director of the Holocaust Educational Foundation of Northwestern University and a lecturer in the History Department at Northwestern. The Holocaust Educational Foundation of Northwestern University advances Holocaust education at the university level throughout the world by supporting scholarship and teaching. Cushman has been involved in Holocaust Education and scholarship for two decades, serving as Director of Youth Education at the Holocaust Memorial and Tolerance Center of Long Island and Head of Educational Programming at the Strassler Center for Holocaust and Genocide Studies at Clark University. She earned her doctorate in Holocaust History from Clark University in 2010. Cushman’s research centers on women’s experiences during the Holocaust and the history of the women’s camp in Auschwitz-Birkenau. She is currently working on her first book, Auschwitz: the Women’s Camp, which is an adaptation of her dissertation. Cushman has written several articles related to this topic including an overview of the history of the women’s camp; an analysis of Jewish women prisoner functionaries; and an exploration of women’s experiences of sexual violence and sexual agency. In addition, she has written a personal essay about her journey to studying the Holocaust and a contribution about the place of Primo Levi in the modern Jewish canon.

Sara E. Brown is the Executive Director of Chhange, the Center for Holocaust, Human Rights & Genocide Education. Brown holds the first Ph.D. in comparative genocide studies from Clark University’s Strassler Center for Holocaust and Genocide Studies. Widely published, Brown currently serves on the Advisory Board for the International Association of Genocide Scholars. Brown has worked and conducted research in Rwanda since 2004, served as a project coordinator in refugee camps in Tanzania, worked in refugee resettlement in Texas, and researched conflict globalization and conflict in Israel. She developed and managed post-secondary education programming for USC Shoah Foundation. Brown served as an academic consultant for Aegis Trust in Rwanda and as the scholarly advisor for Chhange’s museum-quality exhibit, Journeys Beyond Genocide: The Human Experience. She is the author of Gender and the Genocide in Rwanda: Women as Perpetrators and Rescuers and the co-editor of the forthcoming Routledge Handbook on Religion and Genocide.

Ms. Nanette Braun is the Officer in Charge of Communications Campaigns Service in the Strategic Communications Division, United Nations Department of Global Communications (DGC). Ms. Braun joined the United Nations in 1995. Prior to the current appointment, Ms. Braun headed the communications and public advocacy departments at UN Women, the women's rights organization of the UN, and at UN Volunteers, which facilitates the deployment of thousands of volunteers annually in support of the United Nations' peace, humanitarian and development efforts. A journalist by training, Ms. Braun worked for print media and broadcasters in her native Germany and abroad, reporting with particular interest on international politics and humanitarian issues. She holds a M.A. in Modern History and North American studies from Free University Berlin and Technical University Berlin respectively.