In 2025, we expect resources across the UN System to shrink by up to 30% compared to 2023 – back to levels last seen 10 years ago.

Without action, we risk losing our ability to serve those who need us most – with at least 30 million and potentially nearly 60 million lives impacted.

compiles the source documents that UN entities cite when explaining why their programmes exist and why they require resources, enabling better dialogue on mandate implementation

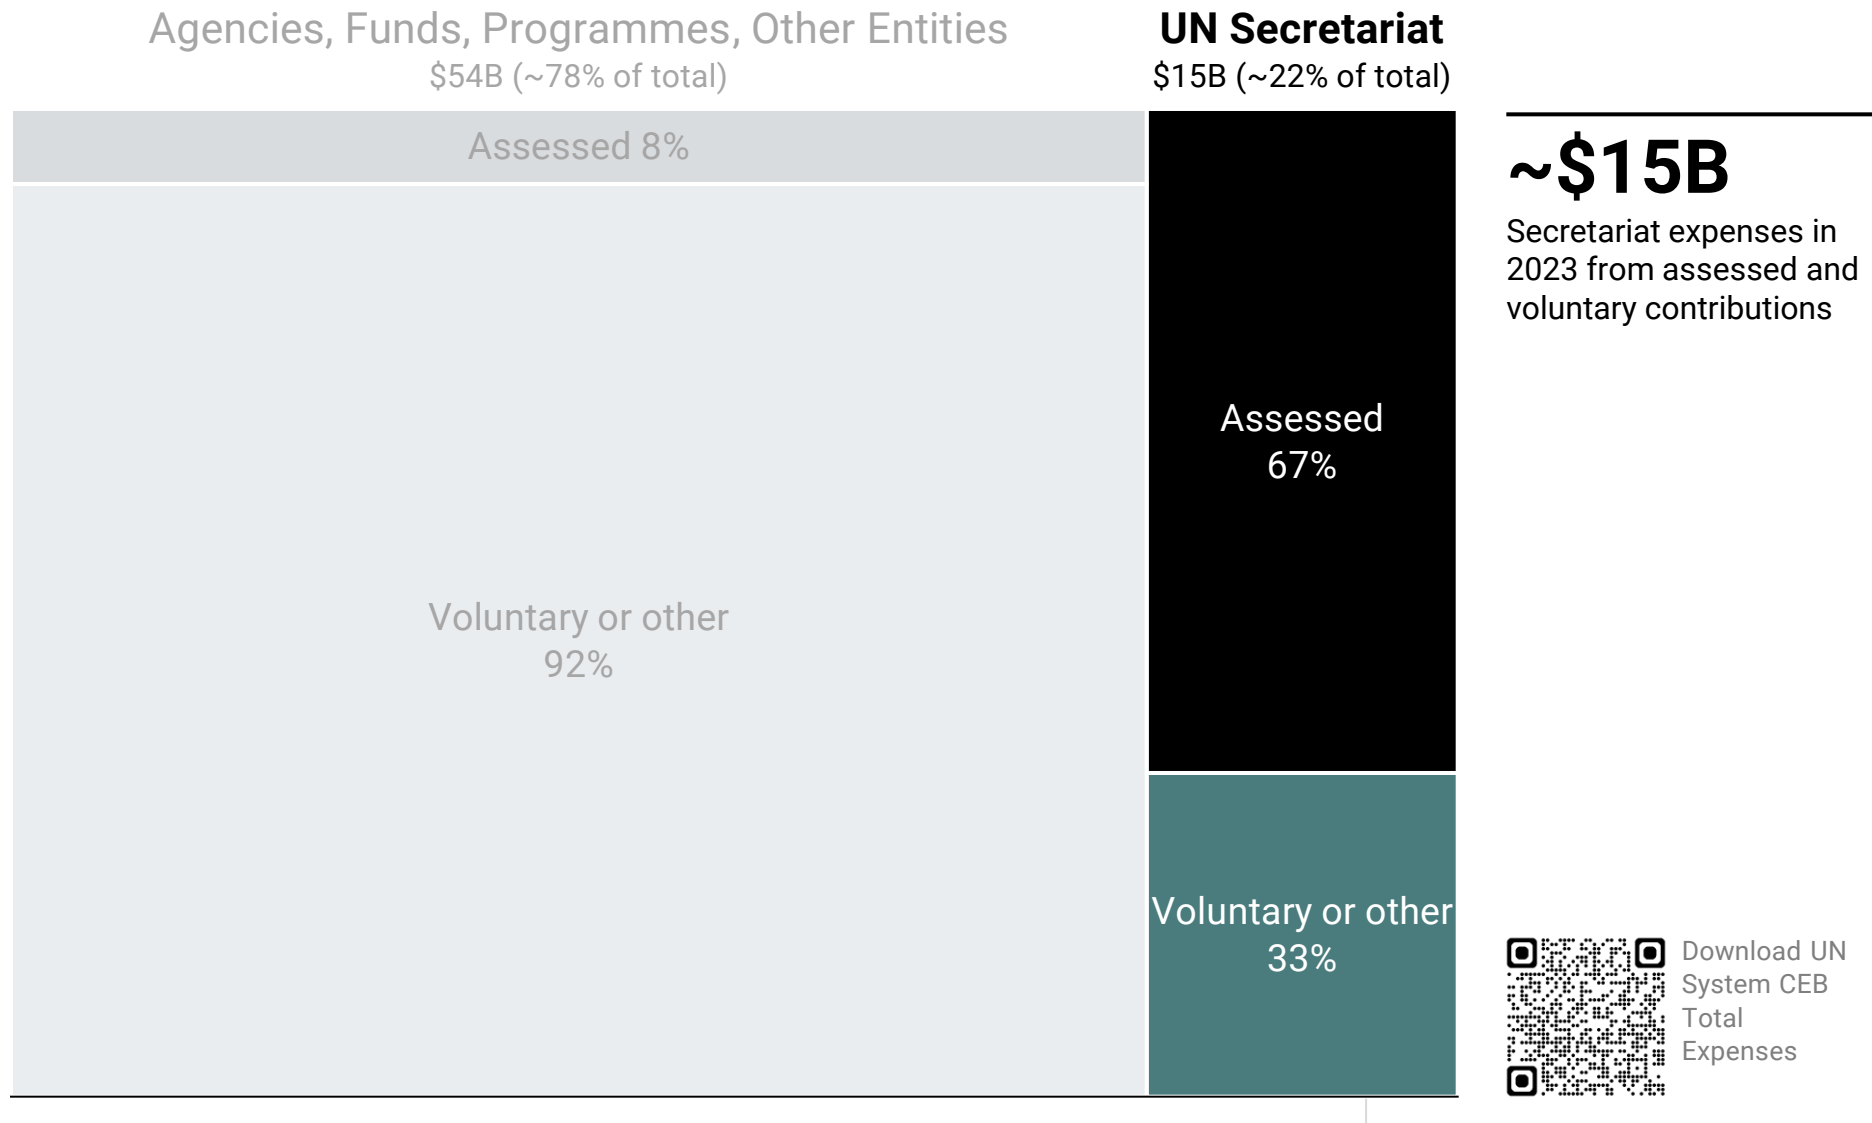

Most of the >3,900 cited documents are from the body of resolutions passed since 1946 – and most of them date from the last 10 years.

UN Secretariat Proposed Programme Budget for 2026. Peacekeeping Budget for 2025/26. UN Digital Library. Number of resolutions and decisions in 1963 was likely affected by financial crisis. 1st session of Human Rights Council was in 2006.

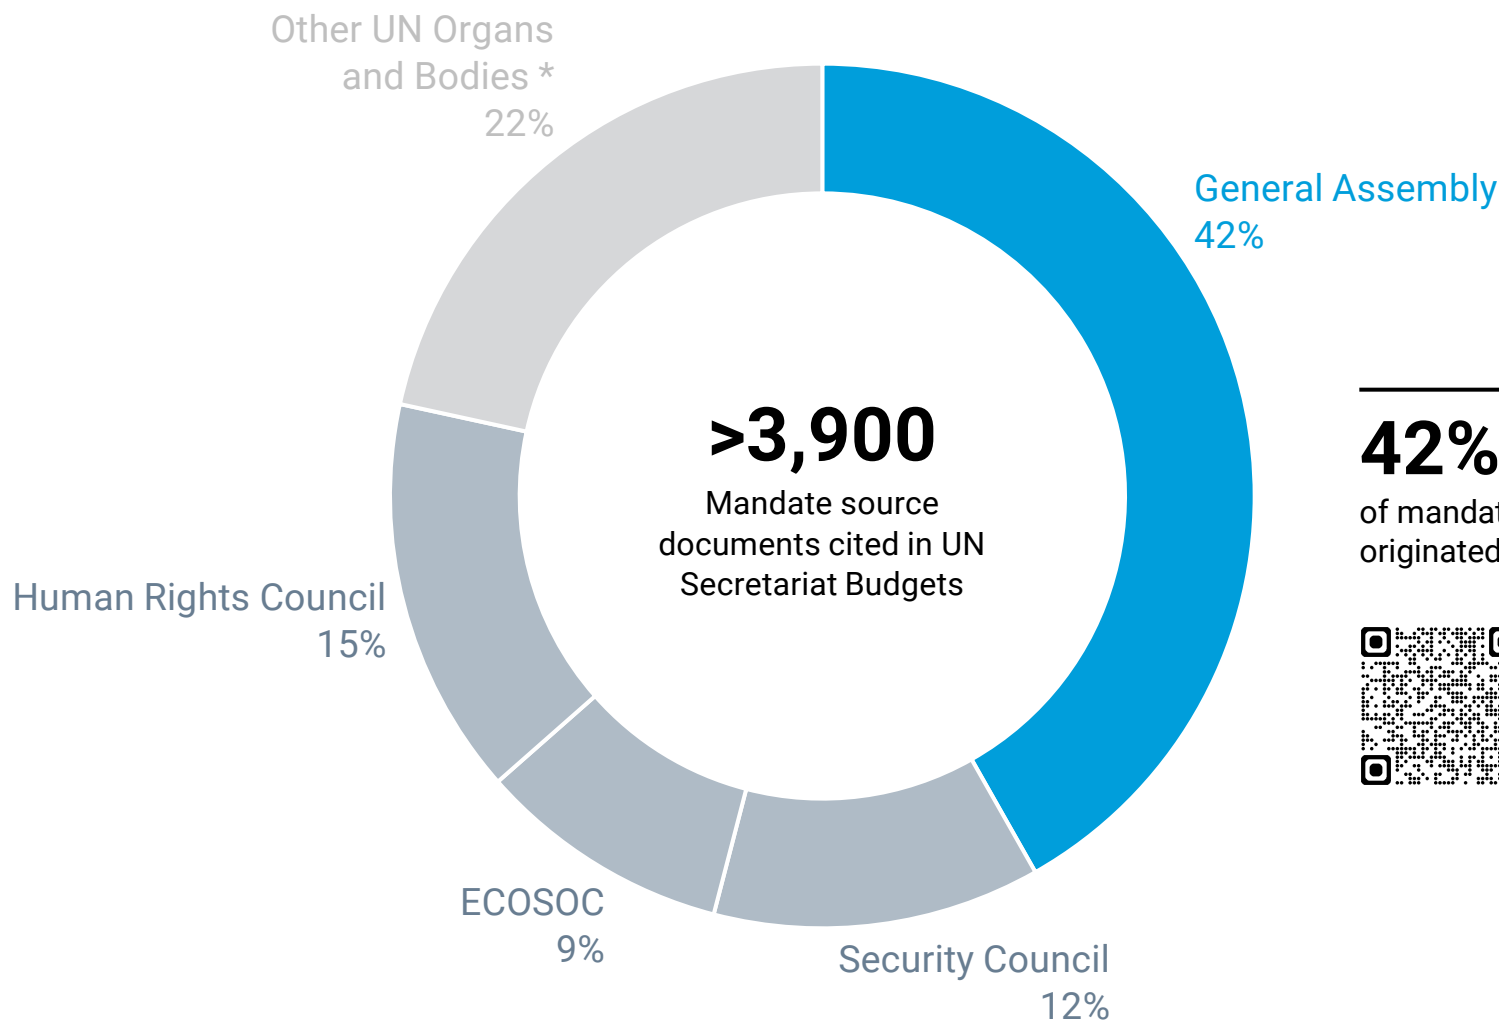

The mandate documents are the basis of UN Secretariat resource requests, totaling about $15B in 2023 – and representing 20% of the UN System total.

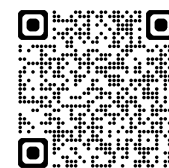

Over 40% of mandates originate from the GA – any changes in mandates will require joint work through the relevant intergovernmental organs.

of mandate source documents originated from the General Assembly

Visit mandates.un.org to explore the data

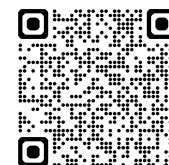

Some UN entities cite a much larger number of mandate documents than others – and 50% of all citations are explained by only 5 entities.

of all citations to mandate documents are made by five of all UN Secretariat-administered entities*

Visit mandates.un.org to explore the data

Some source documents are cited by more than one UN entity, and often these are transformative agendas (e.g., Pact for the Future, 2030 Agenda).

of all mandate source documents are cited by more than one UN entity when requesting resources.*

Mandates entail not only substantive work but also IT, public info, security, conference services. Streamlining mandates will also streamline services.
