All stakeholders have worked hard during the Water Decade not only to inform about water issues but also to develop and coordinate water programs that have improved people's lives around the world. 'Water for Life Voices' highlights the achievements during the Water for Life Decade 2005-2015 by focusing on the people whose life has improved. They share their enthusiasm for the changes that water has brought to their family and to their community and explain what else they intend to do to further improve their living conditions. The exhibit also underscores that more needs to be done to improve people's daily lives, manage water- which is scarce- control pollution and water degradation, and foster water cooperation.

Taking place the same day as the High-Level Interactive Dialogue on the International Decade for Action 'Water for Life' 2005-2015.
