

TV UNITED NATIONS NATIONS UNIES

U.N. IN ACTION

Week of 20 June 2005

Programme No. 962

Length: 3'06"

How do they plan to do that? In part, using this...a satellite... Satellite technology now zaps the most advanced training directly to rural teachers. (10.5)

COMPUTER SCREENS

Teachers meet monthly in rural training centres like this one, where UNESCO and the International Telecommunication Union, create for them a kind of "Interactive Cyber University". Multi Media Designer, Ismael Iljii (14)

ILJII: (Arabic)

IJJI ON-CAMERA

"The trainer in the studio here in the city of Rabat can give a lesson and interact with the teachers watching." (8")

NARRATION

TEACHERS IN A TRAINING CENTRE

Trainers – hundreds of miles away in Morocco's major cities– are filmed teaching new lesson plans....computer skills...and new ways to research using the internet. Teachers in the rural centres watch these classes live via interactive satellite TV...taking notes...and asking questions. This training has already translated into real change back at his classroom says Talibi. (28)

TALIBI: (Arabic)

TALIBI ON CAMERA

"This has improved my performance. I don't rely on the established curriculum; I do my own research to find more modern interesting texts for the students." (8.5)

SCHOOLS/STUDENTS/MODERN TECHNOLOGIES

NARRATION

To date, eleven centres have been established... five hundred teachers trained. Eleven thousand more teachers wait for their training at eighty new sites. As part of additional reforms, nearly three-thousand more schoolhouses will be built in the Kingdoms' most remote areas – every one of which will be equipped with new computers. (21)

LOGO

This report was prepared by United Nations Television. (3)