QUESTIONNAIRE

PART ONE:

Overview of Trends in Achieving Gender Equality and Advancement of Women

Due to the full commitment of the Islamic Republic of Iran to ensure to social justice and respect for the women's rights, under the Islamic teachings, the National Committee, which represented Iran's positions and view points in the Fourth World Conference on Women in Beijing, took following coordinated initiatives to encourage both officials and public, specially women with a view to ensure implementation of Beijing Platform For Action;

* Meeting under the auspices of the then President Rafsanjani and comprising senior officials in different levels of decision-making, reviewing the most important issues raised in Beijing.

* Launching media campaign to increase the public and especially women's awareness on the Beijing Conference and its Platform For Action.

* Translating into Persian the Beijing Platform For Action and the Beijing Declaration with view to familiarizing the relevant governmental organizations, institutions, Judiciary, Legislature and Non-Governmental Organizations with the Beijing Platform of Action.

* Enhancement of the Status of the National Committee (pursuant to an order by the then president) as the main focal point for national programming on women and supervising implementation process of the Beijing Platform For Action.

* Drafting the National Plan of Action with contributions from relevant organizations, Executive, Legislature and Judiciary branches.

* Finalizing Iran's National Plan of Action on the basis of the Beijing's 12 critical areas of concern with emphasis on women's human rights, mass media and institutional mechanisms for advancement of women.
* Obtaining the approval of the highest relevant officials on the National Plan of Action.

* Announcement by the Committee on Finalizing on the relevant organizations to incorporate the National Plan calling into their policies.

Following the Introduction of the National Plan of Action, the necessity for integration of gender-perspective into different policies and programmes was felt and further promotion of women's human rights emphasized.

* State institutions then gave priority to development of institutional mechanisms for the advancement of women. Take the following as instances:

a- Promotion of Bureau for Women Affairs to the Center for Women Participation and the center's head became a member of the Cabinet.

b- Upgrading Judiciary's office for women to the general directorate and developing its branches in different provinces.

c- Convening the Family, Women and the Youth Commission in the Islamic consultative Assembly (Parliament)

d- Development of women's affairs commissions in 243 cities across the country

e- Establishment of women offices in most of the ministries and state organizations.

* The National Committee made positive efforts to promote public awareness about the important role of NGOs as the intermediary agencies between people and the government and to institutionalize this role.

These efforts have induced an increase of more than 50 percent in the number of NGOs since the Beijing Conference. Different national and international educational-consultative workshops were held for the representatives of the women NGOs.

- In health sector the country has taken great steps in improving women's health conditions.

For instance:

a- Population growth rate has decreased to 1.2 from 3.4 in 1995
b- Women's life expectancy at birth increased by one year
c- Maternal mortality rate has been reduced to half of its rate in 1990
d- Almost 100 percent of women in urban areas and 84 percent of women in rural areas are now covered by health services network
e- Effective measures were taken for prevention, early detection and treatment of breast, cervical and other cancers of the reproductive system

- In education and training sectors one of the priorities of Iran's National Plan of Action is to close gender gap in education system. Furthermore Note 62 of the Second Development Plan which calls for identification and enrollment of school-age children with an emphasis on girl-children was enforced. As a result 96 percent of school-age girls are covered by elementary education. Some 89 percent of them complete their primary schooling.

Greater efforts were made through different workshops, educational-consultative courses to encourage and promote education of girls at different levels as well as in technical and vocational education. Girls constituted 52 percent of university admissions in a nation-wide varsity campaign in 1998, in comparison with 47 percent in 1997 or 35 percent in previous years.

Iran's National Plan of Action Emphasizes on women and media and institutional mechanisms for advancement of women.
A- Women and Media

The mass media are powerful means of education and as an educational tools the mass media can be an instrument for educators, governmental and non-governmental institutions for the advancement of women and for development. TV especially has the greatest impact on young masses of people, and as such, has the ability to shape values, attitudes and positive perceptions of women and improve the negative perceptions.

The media have a great potential to promote the status of women and ensure the equality between women and men by portraying women and men in a non-stereotypical, diverse and balanced manner, and by respecting the dignity and worth of human person, specially in those countries where people's attitudes such as sex-segregation and discrimination against women, hinder women's active participation.

B- Institutional Mechanisms for Advancement of Women

Women's empowerment and their full participation on the basis of equality in all spheres of society, including participation in the decision-making process and access to power, are fundamental for the achievement of development and peace.

C- Human Rights of Women

In order to realize peace and development, there is a need to respect human rights of women. Thus promoting human rights of women is one of the main areas on which Iran's National Plan of Action emphasized.

Along with the aforementioned measures, Iran has made intensive efforts to mainstream gender perspective in all national economic, legal, social and political policies.

Political participation, betterment of women's employment's conditions, environmental protection activities, declining gender-gap in education system, allowing access of rural and urban women to education and health care services are the areas where mainstreaming a gender perspective has been most successful.

Since 1995 attention to advancement of women has been reinforced both in government policies and public perception. Several instances of such changes are as follow:

* In the first municipal elections, held on February 26, 1999, a total number of 1,120 7 female candidates were elected through direct voting. The figure points up the fact that public thrust on women's leadership has been boosted since even in small towns and remotest villages women were elected to the city councils.

* Increasing Women employees maternity leave from 3 to four months (up to three children)

* Approving flexible working hours of women employees (upon their request).

* Allocation of special credit to implement 268 educational projects to increase involvement of rural women in environmental protection activities.

* Establishment and development of health care services network.

* Establishment of rural midwifery centers and training 5,000 midwives to render services in rural areas

* Training 36,000 women volunteers (in basin bases across the country) on health information and employing 6,000 of them to render health information to women in communities.

There is no tangible gender gap in education system with 96 percent of school-age girls are covered by primary education.

However, in areas such as elimination of legal obstacles, poverty eradication, changing negative perceptions and patronal attitudes, closing gender gap in high level of decision-making mainstreaming a gender perspective has been least successful.

* The revision process of laws and legislation on women is a long-term complex procedure which makes modification of laws difficult.

* The fact that Iran consists different ethnic groups and subcultures impedes adoption of single cultural measures to remove or correct negative perceptions and attitudes.
Despite the fact that the number of women Member of the Parliament has increased and two women are now members of the cabinet, women still under-represent in high level policy-making and programming.

World's financial crisis with its impacts on oil prices and global decline of the prices has caused a slump in government revenues, decline of investments and recession of domestic products.

Despite government's efforts the crisis affected the families and households either directly or indirectly.

As indirect impact, increasing prices of goods and commodities lowered people's purchase power and women who burden the major responsibility for administering home affairs and children's nutrition are exposed to danger. Thus, they are now more vulnerable than before.

The crisis which also led to decline of government revenues has lowered public budget and consequently intersectoral budget which were allocated to women. The above-mentioned facts have encouraged government to take a greater role in implementation of supportive policies and poverty eradication.

The Islamic Republic of Iran is a victim of unilateral coercive measures and various economic sanctions imposed by U.S. These measures and sanctions have hindered the realization of economic rights of Iranian people especially women and children who are most vulnerable groups to economic disruptions.

PART TWO:

Financial and Institutional Measures

All the budgets which are being allocated to women-centered policies are of domestic and national resources.
Every year's budget bill stipulates a specific amount for women's issues. For instance, the budget bill of 1998 had considered certain amount of credit for female-headed households, sports, education and self-employment of women.

Since the head of the Center for Women's Participation is a member of the cabinet, her presence helps budget allocation to women issues.

The Center for Women's Participation also reviews budget bills and elaborates its comments on the allocation of the budget to women's cultural, social and economic issues.

To follow up Beijing Platform for Action, the Center for Women's Participation uses two mechanisms;

1- National Committee of the Fourth World Conference on Women which was established to attract active contribution of women NGOs and governmental organizations.

2- Coordination Council of Executive bodies' Representatives which explores women issues and follow up the Beijing Platform for Action in its monthly meetings.

Women NGOs were also involved in formulation of the National Plan of Action, programming and setting targets for activities in line with the Beijing Platform For Action. To this purpose a coordinating bureau was established in the Center for Women Affairs to coordinate NGOs cooperation in following up the Beijing Platform For Action.

PART THREE:

Women’s Advancement and Equality for Women in the New Millennium

In the third millennium, as before, sustained economic growth, social development, environmental protection and social justice require involvement of women in economic and social development and their full participation of men.
and women as agents and beneficiaries of people-centered sustainable development.

Widespread economic recession and structural adjustment have been responsible for setting back development goals and advancement of women. Thus in the third millennium such factors should be eased through collective measures.

Although the threat of global conflict has been reduced, wars of aggression, arm conflicts, colonial or other forms of alien domination and foreign occupation, civil wars and terrorism continue to plague many parts of the world and thus leaving women helpless.

On the threshold of the third millennium Dialogue Among Civilizations, which was initiated by President Khatami of Iran, is supposed to help diminish such plagues. The doctrine of Dialogue Among Civilizations will definitely promote mutual understanding among people of different cultures and civilizations. The theory can reduce the conflicts, help peaceful settlement of conflicts and maintain peace and security at the global, regional and local levels which is crucial for the protection of human rights of women and girl-children.
